A few of the most aggravated instances only are ever reported for publication in newspapers, and the great mass of dell'aquencies and d'sorders are not heard of beyond the neighborhoods in which they happen. There seems to be a growing resistance to the authority of both overseers and masters, and the conflicts in such case are becoming almost a natural consequence of su attempt at correction. At last nothing is done but to pass the appropriation bills, and that so lamely and unfashionably that the laws come forth unshapen masses, compounded in about equal proportions of permanent legislation and teausient supplies for the support of government. If anything of importance was done, if any great and striking debate took place during the session, i do not remember them.

Legal provision was made for the expenditure of between forty-five and fifty millions of doltars which the session has cost would have been entirely thrown away.
