THE EMIGRANT'S SONG.

AIR—The Pretty Girl Milking her Cow.

The head-lands were crowning before us,
As we flew through the wide open sea,
While those left behind, who adore us,
Sighed, farewell, acushla machree.

I look'd o'er the waters beneath me,
Whilst onward our good vessel bore;
And those who in sorrow did greet me,
Now stood on the sea beaten shore.

It was a clear, cloudless morning,
The wind from the southward it blew;
The sun rose, the blue waves adorning,
O'er which like a sea-bird we flew.

'Twas then that my heart beat in sadness
At leaving my country behind—
And none could afford me the gladness
Which comforts the wearied in mind.

For there lay the scenes that we cherish,
Which never can leave my fond heart,—
Oh ne'er can that memory perish,
Though ocean may keep us apart.

Then give me the broad billows heaving,
That bear me away o'er the sea;
'Tis the home of our fathers we're leaving,
To dwell in the land of the free.

NICHOLAS LUKEHEART.

*My darling forever.
