Uncle Tom's Grave.

BY MRS. E. S. NICHOLS.

They made him a grave in a hillock of sand,
Green trees over-weeping him there,
The whisper of life that canopied land,
Unbid though it was, by a prayer.
No chest of white marble, with letters of gold,
Lacks up the pitiless skies,
But, great is the turf that lies over the mould;
That hides Uncle Tom from our eyes.

They made him a grave where the shadows were deep,
And there, in the silence and gloom,
They laid the calm brow of the weary to sleep,
The stars twinkling over his tomb.
No coffin or shroud in that rough shaped mound
Envrapp the dark form of the dead;
And only the winds stir the branches around,
That guards Uncle Tom's lowly bed.
