Washington, Dec. 20, 1852.

Hon. W. R. King has nearly reached his mortal goal. He is, I hear, in his seventy-second year, the oldest man of emhence whom we now have in public service. His discase is that form of communition which results from any serious pulmonary affection in extreme old age. His physicians limit their hopes to getting him into a condition to admit of his removal to Alabama, of which there is but a faint prospect. He desirce to repair to the Senate in order to resignin person, but his friends do not expect that he will ever be able to bear the exertion.
