than the wheels on the initide; and that consequently the wheels on the outside must either slides or the track or the axle, must twist. The frequent breaking of axles is no doubt mainly stributable to this cause. Not long since we heard of a case in which one of the wheels of a care in a night-train, on being examined in the morning, was found to have lost one half of its flarge, caused, doubt, ess, by the resistance of a care. No injury resulted, in this case, but how it was avoided can scarcely be imagined.

The acot learn in the case of Gen. Pierce will, we true, turns public attention to the subject of preventing gueha excidents, if possible, and induce the subject of the carth, they were consequently sundered.
