But it is work that ought to be done, will be done eventually, and cannot be done too soon."

Our friends of the new administration, we presume, have counted the cost of this whole sale work. They are not verdant enough to suppose that all this can be done without a conflict with England and other European powers: and doubtless they have made up their minds to meet the inevitable consequences of such a policy. But whether they have, or have not, the power of this Government is in their hands, and it must be just as they choose to say.

Vice President Riso and the Clayton and Bulwern Tranaty.—Hon. J. Bragg, a member of the Honse of Representatives from Alahams, has published a card in the National Intelligencer, in explanation of the apparent inconsistency between the statement made to the Benate by Gen. Cass, on the authority of the Hon. John M. Clayton, in relation to the Clayton and Bulwer treaty, in which he segs:

"Coll be obtained, but 12 is sufficient for practical purposes, and more convenient to manage. Capt Ericeson's of opinion that that will be treating as they choose to say.
