PRIVATE INTERPRETATION .- The Pittsburgh Catholic reads us a lecture on this subject, be cause we are opposed to such public disputations as are now going forward in Philadelphia, be tween the infidel Barker, and Dr. Berg, on the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures. The editor of the Catholic, like all others of his faith, is so filled with one idea, the infallibility of the church as the ground of his religious faith, that he is wholly unable to appreciate or understand any subject not brought to that test. . He has so derstood and perverted our meaning, not tionally we presume, that we should have not known that he was commenting upon our article at all, if he did not expressly tell us so. He takes it for granted, because we possess, in on with a great mass of our people and with all Protestants, an implicit faith in the Di-tine Inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, that therefore we discard the right of private judgment in respect to that matter. A most absurd and illogical deduction, truly. We believe the Inspiration of the Bible on the same principl that we believe that the world is round, and that it revolves on its axis every twenty-four hours and that belief is founded on the strength of the evidence presented to our intellectual faculties.
We disbelieve the infallibility of the Pope on the same principle that we reject the decisions of the church in the case of Gallileo, that the sun revolved around the earth. Our private judgment is necessary in both cases to come to a decision If the infallible church should still insist that the earth was flat, and the sun revolved around it, the editor of the Catholic on his principles of faith would be compelled to believe it however much his reason and intellect would revolt at it. There are some questions in history, faith, morals and science, which have been so thoroughly investigated and so definitely settled, that there is scarce room to cavil and doubt.— They are truths which men receive as such, as soon as the evidence on which it is founded is presented to their minds. That all men do not receive them is no evidence of their falsity, ither would the universal admission of men be absolute evidence of their druth. But when a subject has been fully explored, and nothing further is left to inquise into, and when that subject so greatly affects the welfare and peace of Scriptures, we think all public disupon it is useless and injurious! Espefly is this the case when the caviller has ing to offer in lieu of the faith which he seeks to unsettle. He finds men trusting in the Inspiration of the Bible, and in that faith they are calm, hopeful and virtuous. He seeks end them abroad on the dark sea of uncertainty, doubt and despair. It is for this reason we oppose such public discussions. If any new light could be offered, any new truths deduced, any thing whatever discovered to benefit mankind by such a discussion, we should welcome it as benefit; but in its present aspect, we consider it really injurious. This is the decision of our We believe that the Bible is true, and is of

A meeting of the friends of prohibition was held last evening, composed of the members of the two Houses. Mr. Bigham of Allegheny, was in the chair, and Mr. Miller, of Philladelphis in the chair, and the matter. The main position assumed by the speakers was in favor of the passage of a string gent prohibitory law.

Mr. Miller advocated the passage of an absoliate prohibitory law, but stood in this position almost alone. Mr. Fletcher, and several other members, had changed grounds since the preisons meeting of the friends of the cause, and there was a disposition manifested to present a united front in the Senate and House of Representatives when the matter came up for action.

Phaugh! The cant has done its service and

I must candidly admit that had I written at length yesterday about Mr. Cutting's speech from the representations of others, I should have spoken of it in terms of praise, as a fine rhetorical effort; but in all sincerity, I can say that after reading it, I have not found one eloquent passage, one original thought, or one no-ble aspiration for freedom and the truth. It is plain from the opinion now expressed by Mr. Mitchell, that he waged his warfare with England, without any real principle of liberty at the bottom.
