Washington, March 20, 1854.
To-day witnessed a singular scene in the Senate. The happy, fortunate, and magnatimous settlement of all differences in that body on the was the vote:

have the force of just what it expressed. He said, in effect, that it was the only feature of the bill which he approved—that so far from the bill would have been larger half every northern rep-resentative been at his post. Many of them, be-lieving that the bill would not be reached for resentative been at his post. Many of them, believing that the bill would not be reached for some time to come, availed themsolves of the opportunity to pay a fying visit to their families, and among the rest was one of our representatives, Hon. T. M. Howe. There is no doubt that advantage was taken of their absence to call the bill, up, in the hopd of forcing it through. The scheme has failed; but we trust that no such advantage will sgain be furnished.

Mr. Howe ieth here for Washington on Tacsday night. He would not consequently reach there in season to vote on this occasion. There is no more determined opponent of the bill in the House than Mr. Howe; and had he anticipated this vote, he would doubtless have been in his seat.
