to the favorable consideration of the critzens, the Wheeling Gazette says:

The Hempfield road has now resources to the amount of $1,500,000; the whole cost of the road at the present prices of iron and labor will be something over three millions. The money market is now stringent and it is not desirable to put the bonds of the road in market, for with a great amount of them—they must be deteriorated, and the bonds of the road in market, for with a great amount of them—they must be deteriorated, and delays in the construction of the road must occur. By extending the credit of the city to the road, we ensure its completion to Pittsburgh by the 1st of April, and the completion of the whole road to Greensburg during the next year. When completed from here to Pittsburgh we have no hesitation in saying that its revenues will be largely more than a legal interest upon the cost.

We are pleased to see that our Wheeling neighbors do think it of some importance to be conmacted with us by Railroad, and that they think on this subject says:

During a recent trip through the central and southern portions of this county, on both sides of the river, we made observations and inquiries respecting the condition of the growing wheat crop, as we had opportunity. Very little appears to have been damaged by the frosts of winter and spring. (In the clay lands of Gates, Ogden and Greece, appearances are not so favorable.) An intelligent farmer from Calcidonia informed us that throughout that town and York, on the beech and maple lands, the crop is even more promising than on the oak lands in Whentland, Rush, &c. So, on the whole, we think there is good reason to expect at least an average yield. Farmers are in high spritts—as is natural when land sells at $100 per acre, and wheat at $2 - per bushel.
