A MUNDEREN CONVICTED IN KENTUCKY AT LAST.—A case of murder has just been tried in Lexington, Ky. The circumstances, as they were proved on the trial, were as follows.—Charles Cushing, the deceased, was employed in a confectionary store. About dusk, on the organization of the 20th December last, Mrs. Weigart, the wife of Wm. Weigart, came into the store to make a purchase and stood leaning with her arm on the show case, waiting for some one to attend to her, with her face towards the street.—Cashing was in the back room of the store, where several other youngamen were present, and went out to attend to her. Presently he returned greatly agitated and alarmed, saying that he had insulted a lady, and she would accept no apology, and had gone to inform her husband. The mode of insult was, supposing that he back insulted a lady, and she would accept no apology, and had gone to inform her husband. The mode of insult was, supposing that he back being towards him, he had put his hand on her aboulder, and said, "How are you, pretty?" A difficulty being immediately expected, a pistal was siven to Cushing by one of the content of the state of the public that he would into the would into the words and came back to the secret of the public that he would into the head that he would; but now his organ at Lancaster assures the glade was given to Cushing by one of the content of the state of the public that he will not. That paper ty?" A difficulty being immediately expected, a pistal was given to Cushing by one of the content o aer back being towards him, he had put his hand on her shoulder, and said, "How are you, pretty?" A difficulty being immediately expected, a pistol was given to Cushing by one of the young men present, when soon after Weigart, came into the store, and firing between them in mediately commenced. Cushing's pistol went off, but not in the direction of his adversary. Weigart jumped upon the counter, and fired two or three shots, the last of which proved instantly fatal. The case came up on the 14thinst, and was closed the following description of the closing was defended by able counsel, Mesars Carpenter, B. N. Wickliffo, Harrison, and Woolley. A correspondent of the Louisville Times gives the following description of the closing soons:

The argaments were closed about 6 P. M. and the jury retired to their room. And now came a moment of painful suspense, not only for the pioner and his relatives, but for the community at large. Lexington is so famous, or infamous, for its long list of unpunished murders that ignest excitement was manifested to know pleto and not give a few process that ignest excitement was manifested to know pleto and not a famous, for its long list of unpunished murders that he will not. That papers as the built of the will not. That papers are the will not. That papers and trusts he will not of the prosent and his relatives, how he proved instantly from the contest and then in the direction of his wife was given to Cushing's pistol went of the community at large. Lexington is so famous, or infamous, for its long list of unpunished murders that he will not other products and then into the store, and fired two or the provention of the common and died almost instantaneously. He stated to the officers that he was perfectly willing to be taken as he sures the will not other papers. In that he was perfectly willing to the taken as he therefore the papers and trusts the will not other papers. In the different his wife overlation to the form of the papers with the interests of the followed a dos of stry

the prisoner and any received is so famous, or ir famous, for its long list of unpunished murder that great excitement was manifested to knofamous, for its long list of unpunished murcers that great excitement was manifested to know whether this would add one more to the horrid category. Speculation and surmise ran high as to the result. Some few believed he would be convicted and others that he would be acquitted, but by far the larger number believed that the jury would either find him guilty of murder in the second degree, and send him to the penitentiary, or that they would be unable to agree. To the arprise of all, the jury returned in about twen-y minutes, and, while the audience were wrapty minutes, and, while the audience were waspped in the most agoniting suspense, the foreman in reply to the usual query, "Gentlemen have you a verdict !" said "We have." The crowd stood in breathless silence, "while the clerk read the conclusion of their deliberations:—"We, of the jury, find the prisoner guilty of murder in the first degree."

Then followed a scene which beggars description, and which God grant I may never again witness. The prisoner, entirely overcome, let his head fall on his breast, while his wife, his sister, and his mother gave vent to their anguish in heart-rending screams. His wife threw herself upon his neck, and exclaimed passionately, "Oh, why did I do this!" and "Oh, how could those men find him guilty, when they have families! Oh: I will die." The screams gradually subsided into sobs of grief and anguish, while the mournful, harrowing a scene affilicted judge, jury, har, and spectators. It is now over, and the rendition of that vericate is the death warrant of the only white man who has been convicted here for years, namy years. And while we regret the necessity which called for the interposition of the low, we feel that the juryes have discharged their duty to their God and to their fellow men, have vindicated the majesty of the law, and in doing so, have taken the first step toward removing the foul black stain upon our corporato reputation and putting a check upon this borrid spirit of revenue and enger, which has caused so much of the blood of our citizen desired to see the laws executed, yet pone were there so malignant as to rejoice at this young man's misortune.

Two things are noticeable in this result. The his head fall on his breast, while his wife, his sister, and his mother gave vent to their angulais in heart-rending screams. His wife threw here self upon his neck, and exclaimed his mother where they have chamilies of the dealth warned in the same of the screams gradually subsided into sobs of grief and angulais, while the mountain harvoing the fall the harvoing and the frequent harvoing the fall the fall the harvoing the fall the fall the harvoing the fall t

Our Triedraphic Reports.—The telegraphic reports sent to the press in Pittsburgh, and to the West, from the agent in Philadelphia, are almost universally a day behind the publication of the occurrences in Philadelphia. A synopsis of the news and telegraphic reports sent to the Philadelphia press, and published in those papers, is management of the present arrangement. For instance, we give to-day, a telegraphic despatch of a fire which took place in Philadelphia on Mr. Houston, of Alabama, of the Committee and Mr. Houston, of the Committee and Mr. Houston, of the Committee and especially Lexington, that every insult must be wiped out in blood. But for that sentiment he would have demanded an explanation and apology, which would have been freely granted, and two lives saved, and a world of misery prevented. The most guilty and wretched of the party is the unhappy wife, who refused to receive the humble apologies of the alarmed and agitated Cushing, and who led her husband to the scene of slaughter for which he is now to suffer death, to satisfy the demands of insulted justice. If she ever can hereafter know one moment's peace, except that which is derived from a Divine source, she is not worthy the name of woman.

On There were the demands in the two routes are just the demands in the two dividing nothing but stock dividends—even the tlaveland and Columbus, we hear, will pay half of their next dividend in new stock—value of the pay half of their next dividend in new stock—value of their dividend in new stock—value
