We say nothing about the immense sums borrowed from abroad to build Railroads, for we have taken these in manufactured goods, which, have taken these in manufactured goods, which, has this great increase of circulation made money any plentier? Is it not now scarcer and dearce than at any provious time? It now takes twice as much money to do business with as be-fore the increase of the circulating medium, or-ding to the increase of money is not an increase of the walth and capital of the country, which con-mates mainly in the products of labor. Money is the standard by which we estimate the value of labor: The increase of money does not increa the amount of property or the products of labor it only increases its relative value. For instance we say a bushel of wheat is now worth two dollars, and a day's labor one dollar and twenty-five cents. A few years ago they were worth but half these sums. Why is this? Money has becom so plenty that it has lost its relative value to these articles, and it takes twice as much to purchase them as formerly. Is any one benefitted by these increase Certain parties may be, but the com munity is the loser. If wages and salaries are increased so is the price of provisions and rents, and all the necessaries of life and they usually keep so his land bill. They have, they say, no objection far ahead of the increase of wages, as to make it to Mr. Hunter's gambling for the Presidency, more difficult than ever to make the two ends of but they utterly referse to put their property up far ahead of the increase of wages, as to make it the year meet. A merchant is not benefitted, as the margin between buying and selling price is not much greater than before, while the greater amount of capital he needs, the speculative character of business, the losses by discounts and failures, render his business more precarious and less profitable than before. The Manufac tover pays more in wages and for raw material, and is consequently not the gainer. The farmer may gain one year but he is in danger of losing in the next. He has to pay more for labor, and dearer for what he purchases, while the inflated has taken up the issue relative to the public of land prevents many from realizing the life-long anticipation of owning a home. These are a few of the evils which have suggested themselves to us, as the consequences of that extent. atural inflation of the currency, growing out of the power to create representatives of money, not founded on a specie basis. There are others which we could name, by which the community is greatly the sufferer, but we forbear for the esent. Our object is to lead the public to con it a great and growing evil, that of the will be no impediment to him. He stands for-lication of banks. There was a time when mplate a great and growing evil, that of the we favored a free banking law for our own State, founded on State stocks. Experience has convinced us we were wrong. The immense num enemy of the Homestead principle cannot be doubted, yet he will doubtless receive the hearty ber of these creations in Indians, and other west support of the Hon. John L. Dawson, the father ern States, we are thoroughly convinced has already been productive of great evil, and the final of that measure; and this notwithstanding that result connot be other than disastrous, bringing ruin and beggary, directly and indirectly, upon Hunter is the aseassin of the bill which he carried through the House. The sooner the system random, for that measure was not opposed with Is done away with the better. n open and honest zeal by Mr. H., and in a fair combat it must have prevailed, but it was assas

The following extract from an article on Currency and Banking in the last number of Hunt's Merchants' Magazine is to the point:

Merchanic Alogithe is to the point: "Without a circulating medium a division of labor would be impossible; but we may say; that it does not follow from that circumstance that an indefinite increase of that circulation would be beneficial to the general interests, nor even that a relative increase is absolutely necessary to pub-lic prosperity. In the latter case the decrease of prices would be slow, gradual, and equal, and no sudden checks nor revulsions would take place...and the almost impercentible change kept up among the party organs, over the re-mains of this bill, it is probable that a strenuous effort will be made to pass it next session: not of its sails by the passage of Cobb's graduation bill originating in the House. Dan Sickles brings no very important intelliplace, and the almost imperceptible change would always be in favor of that class which exwhat are yo be in layor of that class which ex-reficion has proven can seldom protect them-ities; and who, under present circumstances, re-recountantly compelled, to wage war with the apitalist. Under present developments, how-rer, we need not borrow any trouble upon that said, as experience teaches sufficiently that it a paper. Spile's plan is understood to be to em-pluy one-third of the ten millions which the Presihead, as experience teaches su iently that if a currency, once settled, be left to take its natura course, its increase would at all times be fully equal to the incr ease of other capital. And further, experience indisputably proves that an -in subsidizing the insurgent leaders in order further, experience indisputatoly proves that an ------increase of money is not an increase of capital. It to is a very common remark that money is very a reactor, and that we require an increase of banking capital. But this is said either by in-dividuals who for their own interest rockleasly speak an unitruth, or only ignorably rocks alto what they do not understand. The fact is that they on paramount increase of money capital cart. give the present revolutionary attempt a right direction, and to use the other two thirds by way of a cash payment to the provisional government for Cubs. The scheme is not altogether new in our diplomacy, for it is well known that Polk tried very hard to get three what they do not uniterstand. The fact is that no paramount increase of money capital care take place under any circumstances; that is that in increase of money is not an uncrease of cap-ital. It is a mere chimerical notion put forth by the interrested, and adopted by the risionst. It is of the mature of money is not an uncrease of cap-ital. It is a mere chimerical notion put forth by the interrested, and adopted by the risionst. It is of the mature of money to develop its own em-is entirely immaterial, under the fixed price of the precious metals. An increased quantity is no some lissued than prices take a fresh range, and again absetb all the money in existence, juri as before, with the slight difference, that it is no solution the specifiest possible means, without ther we set from theed. The proposition is so that the forther we travel on this road the fur-that the forther we travel on this road the fur-ther we get from the end. The proposition is so plais and so easily understood, that it appears to party. He kept cautionaly and wisely aloof from the controverse on the d plain and so cannot materisod, that it appears to party. It sept cautoasity and wisely aloof unnecessary to elunidate it. "The staple necessaries of life, those which form the bulk of the expenditores in every man's household, always rise in price first; while which in a lists, be found they were to form the chief planks in the party platform, he bastened to climb upon it, and to publish long gene. It is therefore a makter of necessity that been increased, and the relative supply and de-been increased, and the relative supply and de-mand between labor and money remains the same, beight is scaled. The Hunker papers, headed with his land hill. The organs of the Young mericans, otherwise called the B'hoys, of which Douglass is the "Mose" oppose Hunter, his Pre-sidential claims, his schemes, and in particular as the stakes. Mr. Hunter is the residuary leg atee out of South Carolina, of John C. Calho Mr. Calhoun had three crotchets, to wit: slavery donation of the public lands to the new Stat under the disguise of pre-emption at a nomina price, and a Southern Confederacy. Nobody rviving him seems capable of managing the first and last items of this political capital, as his peculiar and exclusive property, and by common consent they are considered 'Appsed legacies,' or at least "suspended interests." Mr. Munter lands, and his bill lately passed by the Senate and rather contumeliously passed over by the House, is simply the revival of Calhounism t
