The foregoing is a calm and deliberate asserion of a claim which has produced and will yet oduce more excitement and more sectional trife and bitterness than all other questions con ned. It is informed, as our readers will per cive, with a tone of brutal inhumanity which

It is said that "the property in slaves is recog-nized by the Constitution." and many honest men mong us have been troubled by this declaration iterated and reiterated in a thousand forms by he apologists of slavery in the free states, as well is by its advocates in those which are not free. vere castigation to the office holders who thrust The assertion is utterly false. It has no partithemselves into the controversy. They express cle of truth to stand upon. There is no tittle of cle of truth to stand upon. There is no title of fast in which it could have had its origin as a fast in which it could have had its origin as a Pensylvania and New York in the important feeble pretense and thus by degrees have grown to its present proportions as a confident artement of right. The Constitution does not recognize ections about to take place there next month. The meetings of the office holders were held for slaves as property ; but on the contrary contains within itself proof that its framers intended to exclude the presumption that men could be held as property, under its authority. The word SLAVE is no where found in the Constitution -la every passage where reference is made to that class of inhabitants, the word PERSONS is used. The word slave was used in some parts of mendments and projects offered for inco into the constitution, but exception was taken to use, because the idea of property would or might follow, and that word was stricken out as to require, but almost to defy control. 106 proximate cause of this adden impulse of the American mind may be found in the Romish 'crasade against the Public Schools, in the at-tempted suppression of the Bible, in the insolent denial by that priesthood of the scredness of Protestant marriages, and in its efforts, at once interview. They but he has no right to deseive the people and to endeavor to secure their votes by a denial of the truth. There are thousands of voters who will not vote for a Know Nothing if they know it. It was to secure this vote which originated Mr. Mott's declaration to Mr. Bonham that he did not belong to a secret society, "commonly called Know Nothings," when he knew hat he did belong to such a society, and that they were engaged in balloting for him at the very time.

But what are we to think of the consistency of the Pennsylvanian and other Democratic papers, which denounce all Know Nothings as unworthy f support and still keep the name of Mr. Mott at the head of their columns, and ask their party friends, foreigners and Catholics, to vote for him ? The Pennsy loanian, & few days ago, after stating | no more entitled to our sympathy and protection that the Know Nothing Lodges of the city of Philadelphia had given the Democratic candidate for Becorder 3008 majority, and " Henry S. Mott a still larger majority," adds the following remarks:

If true, they never can gain say advantage by supporting a known and sworn enemy, for the sake of a temporary gain. Such a gain would be loss of the most disastrous kind. And with the well known fact before the peo-ple, that no man known to below to the order of "Know Nothings" could scare a momination in the Democratic party, there can be no obligation upon that party to support such a nomination when the that party to support such a nomination when the truth of his membership shall be properly revealed." "The Union of this city, in accordance with the above principles, recommends to Democrats to trase from their tickets the name of every can didate who is known to belong to the new secret order. And yet these papers support Mr. Mott nd other Know Nothings, and the Pennsylvanian chuckles over the defeat of Mr. DARSIN because

There is no reason to support that matters will change in this respect, in the future, but unless they look sharp, they will be long standing. He is an intelligent, hono and moral man. There is nothing sgainst him that we know of, but that he "had the misfortune," most shamefully cheated | the approachin election. We suppose that nothing would to use the language of the Pennsylvanian in re-gard to Mr. Darsie, to be born in Ireland, and chagrin a foreigner or a Catholic more than to be deceived into voting for a Know Nothing, as ame to this country when a very little boy.
