Pianos! Pianos!! Pianos!!!
ATTENTION of purchasers is respectfully called to a new and gigantic invention in Piano Fortes, now fully perfected, and before the public, known as Hall's Celestial Triple stringed Piano. The peculiarity of the Celestial Piano consists in its capacity for octave playing with the single finger, an attainment hitherto unknown to the Piano Forte.

The most ordinary performer is enabled by the aid of this improvement to produce effects in octave playing that would confound a Thalberg or a Listz. One of its chief excellencies is its capacity to be used at will as an ordinary Piano of the sweetest quality of tone, and is instantly changed by the use of a common pedal to a combination so thrilling and majestic, as to captivate and charm the heart. These instruments are superior in power to two ordinary 7 octave Pianos, while for sweetness, purity, breadth, and richness of tone, they challenge the competition of the world.

This is the united testimony of Professors and Amateurs who have tested the Celestial Piano. Ordinary Pianos of all sizes, new and second hand for sale at reduced prices. ELY & MUNGER, 321 Broadway, New York, se21-3mv Manufactures & Dealers, wholesale & retail.

CATHOLIC THEORY OF MORALITY.

St. Alfonso de' Liguori's Theory of Theft.

ART. IV.—1.—Theologia Moralis S. Alphonsi de Ligorio. Fundatoris Congregationis SS. Redemptoris ac olim Episcopi S. Agathæ Gothorum. Editio novissima: curavit P. Michl. Heilig, Congr. SS. Redemp. Presbyter, et Professor Theol. Moralis. Parisiis, 1845.

2. Homo Apostolicus sive Praxis et Instructio Confessariorum. Auctore illustrissimo et reverendissimo D. Alphonso de Ligorio. Editio nova. Moguntiæ, 1842.

3. Compendium Theologiæ Moralis S. Alphonsi Mariæ de Ligorio; Auctore D. Neyraguet, Presbytero Diœcesis Ruthenensis Missionario. Liburni, 1851.

THAT S. Alfonso Maria de Liguori's Theologia Moralis is the latest exponent of Rome's moral system we have already made clear, in an article which appeared in our January number of the present year. We showed that he had been beatified and canonized so late as the year 1839; that the Sacred Congregation of Rites had examined his system of morality twenty times, and had agreed, "with concordant voice, with unanimous consent, with one voice and with one mind," that it contained nothing to be censured. We showed that an authoritative document issuing from the Sacred Penitentiary in 1831, decreed that the opinions professed in the Blessed Alfonso's Moral Theology might with safety be followed and professed, on the ground that the Holy Apostolic See had declared that it found nothing in his works worthy of censures and that the Cardinal Archbishop of Besançon had required his clergy to adhere to the judgment of Rome, by following and reducing to practice the opinions of the Blessed Alphonso de' Liguori, all doubt whatever being thrown aside. But it appears that the beatification, canonization, commendation, approbation, ratification, and sanction have not been sufficient to persuade some of our readers that all members of the Roman Church are really tied to accepting his morality. Indeed with respect to Englishmen who are members of the Roman Communion, we cannot wonder at a little kicking, and plunging, and tossing the yoke, when they find what they have to bear. We must, therefore, add more testimony, showing on unimpeachable authority that Rome is committed to S. Alfonso, and that his morality is her morality.

The preface to his Moral Theology opens as follows: 'The new edition of S. Alfonso de' Liguori's Moral Theology, which has been long looked for from the Mechlin press, is at last published. The work which is thus issued afresh after innumerable editions and no small labor, is not only the teaching of a very learned, experienced, and wise author, but of a Saint; and it is approved by the judgment of the Catholic Church itself. We hold, therefore, that it is a superfluous task to commend or defend it against those who find fault with it, since it has been commended and defended by the oracle of the Church itself.'

Again: 'We have issued a work in which, by the judgment of the Roman Church itself, there is found nothing, no opinion and no principle, which is deserving of censure; of this we are most perfectly assured by the decree concerning the revision of S. Alfonso's works. The teaching of Benedict XIV. about the canonization of Saints shows us what force the Apostolic approbation has, and what is the mind of the Church in approving of the writings of the servants of God with a view to their canonization. In our times all the writings of a servant of God, who is to be placed among the Blessed, must be subjected to an extremely rigid examination according to the decrees of Urban VIII., and the approved teaching of Benedict XIV.—And the purpose of a judicial revision of this nature is that it may be seen whether the teaching of the servant of God be free from all theological censure. Now every proposition which is heretical, erroneous, approaching to error, savouring of heresy or error, suspected of error, rash, scandalous, offensive to pious ears, ill-sounding, misleading to the simple, schismatical, injurious, impious, or blasphemous, is subject to theological censure, several sorts of which Benedict himself recounts. The revisers are bound to note if there is in the works any error against faith or good morals, or any new doctrine unaccordant with the sense of the Church; meaning by new doctrine, not anything brought forward in a new way, but something put forth which is really new, vain, useless, opposed to Scripture and to the Fathers. It is the duty, therefore, of the revisers to subject every single proposition to its own special censure, and to pass judgment on the quality of the propositions as they are in themselves, independently of the author's intention, so that it is impossible to proceed further when once they find that the servant of God has written anything against the faith, or good morals, or the sense of the Church, although he wrote it with a good intention. An examination of this nature having been instituted with a view to the canonization of S. Alfonso de' Liguori, and the Church having declared that in his works 'there was found nothing worthy of censure,' it follows that it is safe for any one to follow and profess the opinions which S. Alfonso professes in his Moral Theology, and that no man is to be troubled for doing so, although he may not have weighed the reasons on which the several opinions rest.'

The meaning of nihil censura dignum is then further explained to be a true approbation 'by which it is certain that the whole teaching of our saintly author is altogether free from every error which the Church now sees to be error. The works of S. Alfonso, therefore, rejoice in this highest and singular privilege, which those of no uncanonized moral writers can possess, for in their case it is not made certain by so solemn a judgment of the Church, that there is no error, no erroneous principle, no erroneous opinion in their writings. But we are now made quite sure, by the infallible judgment of the Catholic Church, that in S. Alfonso's works, in the whole of his Moral Theology, there is not one principle disapproved, not one opinion against the faith or good morals, new, unaccordant with the sense of the Church, heretical, erroneous, approaching to error, savouring of heresy or error, suspected of error, rash, scandalous, offensive to pious ears, ill-sounding, misleading to the simple, schismatical, injurious, impious, or blasphemous. And this being so, who will not confess that in the matter of morals, grave and difficult as it is, and so involved with doubts and questions, minds are wonderfully set at rest by an approbation of this nature, which, if not called formally positive, is practically the same?'

Neyraguet is no less happy and confident. Having quoted the approbation of Pope Pius VII., Pope Leo XII., Pope Pius VIII., and Pope Gregory XVI., he continues; 'Thus by acting and teaching, to heaven flew off the Blessed One. What can you prize higher? what happier lot can you wish for yourself? There is then no danger of erring, no possibility of fearing hell in following the steps of so great a man. It is no wonder, therefore, that in these times this Theology is everywhere desired and sought after; that it is extolled with the highest praises by prelates of Churches, and the chiefest doctors, not only in Italy, but also in Germany, Belgium, France, &c.; that it is circulated throughout the whole world, and is in the hands of almost all the clergy. What then can be more absurd than to find fault with a work of such singular excellence, which innumerable doctors and so many oracles of the Holy See have so highly commended!'

In the same way the Redemptorist Father who has translated S. Alfonso's Glories of Mary, stands over some reluctant friends whom he mentally anticipates as recalcitrating at some of the tales which are recounted, like Queen Eleanor before Fair Rosamond, with his nihil censura dignum in one hand, and his book in the other, and tells them to take their choice between condemning the Holy See, and swallowing the miracles, having himself, with delightful inconsistency, omitted two of the stories as being totally impossible of digestion to an English stomach. 'Remember,' he says, 'that it has been strictly examined by the authority which is charged by God Himself to instruct you, and that that authority has declared that it contains nothing worthy of censure, and that it has been welcomed by all lovers of Jesus and Mary, throughout the world, with enthusiasm.' (1)

The Bull of Canonization was issued by the present Pope's predecessor, Gregory XVI., and in it we find the late Pontiff announcing as imprimis notatu dignum, quod licet copiosissime scripserit, ejusdem tamen opera inoffenso prorsus pede percurri a fidelibus posse, post diligens institutum examen perspectum fuerit. If any ask, even yet, for evidence, the following passage from the Life of S. Alfonso de' Liguori, edited by the Fathers of the Oratory, and approved and recommended by Cardinal Wiseman, may satisfy them. 'The works of S. Alfonso not only do not contain any proposition whatever which can be called schismatical or scandalous, but also none which are either pernicious, erroneous, or rash; the morals, therefore, of this saintly Bishop cannot be censured without setting up as a censor of authority itself; without, in fine, censuring the decision of the Holy See.'

(1) P. xviii. The Glorie di Maria is a book which S. Alfonso tells us that he has printed for the sake of providing Priests with materials for sermons on Saturdays, and for Novenas in honor of S. Mary. From the headings to the chapters we learn that S. Mary is Queen of Mercy and our loving Mother; that she obtains us the pardon of our sins and perseverance, and renders death sweet; that she is the Hope of all; that her intercession is necessary for our salvation; that she is a tender Advocate, able to save all; that she is the Peace-maker between sinners and God; that she delivers her clients from hell, succors her clients from purgatory, and leads her servants to heaven; that she is the Treasury of all divine graces; that she offered to God the life of her son; that she is the Queen of Martyrs—together with many more 'new inventions of honors,' as Father F. W. Faber approvingly terms them. Cardinal Wiseman cordially recommends the English translation to the Faithful. So do we. We think few books on the subject more instructive.

The character of Rome's moral teaching is then irrevocably tied to the character of Liguori's teaching. And it must not be thought that he is the representative of a lax school among Roman Casuists. On the contrary, he makes it his greatest boast that he is not an extreme man, that he is not over-strict or over-lax, but holds the middle course. 'In completing this work,' he says in his Preface to his Homo Apostolicus, speaking of the Theologia Moralis, 'I have toiled for fifteen years, going over and weighing the teaching of very many writers whom I have examined. Some I found too indulgent, for led by a false zeal for expediting the salvation of souls, they have granted too much liberty, not without prejudice to the laws divine and ecclesiastical; and others I found who, detesting so great compliance, have fallen into the other extreme of excessive rigor. This has been my greatest labor, to select from such a congeries of opinions those sentiments which on one side have due regard to the precepts of God and of the Church, and which on the other do not add burdens which have not been imposed by God, nor tie every one to a perfection which human weakness renders morally impossible to the common run of the faithful.' And again in the preface to the Theologia Moralis itself: 'So I have determined to publish this new work to hold a middle place between too lax and too severe opinions.' And in his tract upon Conscience: 'I protest that as I do not approve of confessors who adhere to over-great austerity, and condemn being a number of opinions which rest on a grave foundation; so on the other hand, I cannot approve of those who easily admit opinions as probable, which are without sure foundation.' (1) In fact Liguori is a safe via media man, as Rome counts safeness. (2)

(1) Theol. Mor. 1. 1. 83.
(2) The strict school consists of Merbesius, Contenson, Natalis Alexander, Juenius, Cabassutius, Collet, Genettus, Petrocorensis, and Concina, almost all of whom, it will be seen, are Gallicans. It was really for its strict moral teaching, and not for its speculative dogmas, that Jansenism, the child of Gallicanism, was proscribed.—'The Jansenites,' says their enemy Franciscus, 'have their Theology, both speculative, and practical or moral: their speculative Theology is Jansenism, their practical or moral Theology is Rigorism. This has three principles. To make very much of the Fathers, little of the Pontiffs, nothing of modern Theologians. To pay true regard to the Fathers, as quoted by themselves, a pretended regard to the Pontiffs, to the other Doctors neither one nor the other. Never to leave S. Augustin, real or spurious, and not to interpret the Doctor by Councils, but Councils by him: sometimes to go near Pontiffs when teaching ex cathedra and to profess to do so—if, that is, they are not against them.' Always to avoid Schoolmen, especially those of the two last ages, in controversies with respect to morals, both in subject and in manner of speech, and not even to read them, far less make honorable mention of them in their writings and books.' Well would it have been for France and for the Christian Church, had not maligned Jansenism fallen beneath the calumnies and violence of its semi-Pelagian assailants! And well would it be for France now if she could recall the spirit of her Arnaulds and her Pascals, instead of cherishing in her bosom the extremes of Ultramontanism.

The American Arctic Expedition—Rescue of Dr. Kane.

It appears that serious fears are entertained for the safety of the "Grinnell" expedition, under command of Dr. Kane, sent in search of Sir John Franklin, and a proposition has been started that a steamer be sent in search of it. The subject was to have been discussed at a meeting of the New York Chamber of Commerce yesterday, and the Commercial states that the Hon. John P. Kennedy and Mr. Grinnell will co-operate with Judge Kane (father of Dr. Kane) and others, in urging the matter upon the immediate attention of Congress. E. Meriam, Esq., in a communication to the Commercial, makes a strong appeal to the public to unite in the application to Congress. He says:

"A steam vessel can be sent to Upernavik and thence to the head of Smith's Sound, on the opening of the spring; the run can be made in a short time; and it will be a salutary change for some of our naval marine that has been debilitated in tropical climes."

Mr. Meriam's communication contains some facts of interest. After stating that the great drift of Arctic ice of the floe of 1853-4, has ceased, and that Dr. Kane has not returned, he says:

"There can be, we think, no doubt that his vessel, the Advance, is frozen in, and he has therefore no means to come away until another floe; and years may elapse before such another takes place. There have been but three great Arctic ice drifts during the last fifteen years; the first of these reached lat. 60 deg. North in March, 1842, and continued till September of that year: the second commenced in December, 1850 and continued till August, 1851—upon that drift the Advance and Rescue rode, in spite of cold so intense that it congealed quick-silver, full six months and six days, a wonderful testimony of a superintending Providence; the Erebus and Terror, Franklin's abandoned ships, rode past the coast of Newfoundland in April, 1851, on the same crystal floe, and were the ships 'housed in' seen by a vessel bound from Limerick to Quebec; the third drift commenced in December, 1853, and continued in prodigious flow till into the month of October, 1854, a term of greater duration than I have ever before recorded. Past observation leads me to the conclusion another drift of great extent need not be expected the coming year.

"Doctor Kane and his little band of sixteen noble souls went forth to the frozen zone upon a glorious errand—they went to seek and save those who were lost. Should they who so nobly stepped forward in a work of mercy, who periled life to save life, be abandoned to starvation and to death? No, no, they must be rescued.—Thousands and tens of thousands of kind hearts will sustain me in this reply.

"The venerable father of Dr. Kane (Judge Kane, of the United States District Court of Pennsylvania) received letters from his son at Upernavik, which is within the Arctic circle, and in lat. about 73° north; he then was on his way to Cape Alexander, which is in lat. about 77° north, long. about 75° west, and intended to proceed thence as far to the north as the ice would permit, and then make his way by land toward the long and anxiously sought geographical pole of our earth. It is probable that the great flow of ice has opened a way, and his youthful ambition has tempted him still onward, and in the meantime his vessel has remained frozen in, and on his return to the Advance has been unable to get away.

"Pennsylvania will apply to Congress, probably the present week, for a vessel to send out to bring home Dr. Kane and his gallant little band. Maryland will follow in the good work. Shall New York remain idle? No; New York will unite with her sister States in this life-saving effort."

Mr. Meriam also states that Dr. Kane, in his last letter to him, written when off the coast of Newfoundland, expressed a confidence in being able to reach a creditable degree of northerness, and that desire may have carried him to the very verge of the extreme North border of our globe.

THE MOSQUITO FORAY.—The New York Courier states that "the Government of Nicaragua does not acquiesce in the proposed colonization of the Mosquito territory by the company under Col. Kinney, and will probably interpose a most energetic remonstrance, not only with our own government but with the representatives of the foreign powers generally."

KNOW-NOTHINGS IN CONGRESS.—A Washington correspondent says:

It is stated that on a direct vote a large majority of the House would be found Native Americans in principle, and that about 80 members belong to the Know-Nothing order.

THE ACCOUNTS OF MR. C. L. RUSSEL, EX-COLLECTOR AT CLEVELAND, OHIO.—We learn that since that person has been indicted under the Treasury law for defalcation, he has paid into treasury, through the District Attorney of Ohio, $25,000, and has secured $50,000 more subsequently, so that it cannot fail to be eventually recovered. It is not yet known what is the precise balance due from Russell, this being one of the "false entry" cases alluded to in the report of the Secretary of the Treasury.—Wash. Star.

The steamer North Star, Capt. G. B. Sawyer, left Detroit for Cleveland on Monday afternoon at four o'clock, taking the north passage, but running for Cunningham's Island. When near there she breached to, and returned to Malden, Put-in Bay, where she lay until Tuesday morning, and arrived at Cleveland on Wednesday afternoon. The North Star did not get clear of a continued field of ice until off Black River.—She reports some thirty vessels in the ice and unable to move, at Put-in Bay, off Point-au-Pelee, and "along shore." The schooner Florence, laden with merchandise for Monroe, was at Put-in Bay, with a hole in her bottom; the propeller Spaulding lying near her, light. Several vessels were on St. Clair flats, frozen in; and the brigs Great West and Herman, and the schooner Arcturus, were in St. Clair River.

THE RECENT STORM.—The damage by the recent storm was immense, especially at the North and East. The Erie R. R. mail trains were delayed six hours, and the trains between Buffalo and Albany suffered a still greater loss of time. At Albany and its neighborhood, an immense number of barges, canal and other boats, were stranded along the shore or sunk. Others were frozen firmly in at different points, and the navigation was effectually checked. About fifty boats were frozen in the Erie Canal, and no hope is entertained of getting them through at this season. The mails between New York and Boston were seriously obstructed. On the lakes there were many disasters and great loss of property. Along the river St. Lawrence, between Montreal and Quebec, several steamboats and other craft were sunk, trees were blown down, houses unroofed, and much other injury was done.

A NEW YORKER IN PRISON IN AUSTRIA.—The New York Times has received a long statement of the peculiar hardships experienced by Mr. Martin Speer, formerly of that city, and now under sentence of the Austrian Government for ten years imprisonment at hard labor. The circumstances of the case are as follows:

Martin Speer is a respectable naturalized citizen of the United States of German birth, but fourteen years a resident of New York, where he has been employed by Messrs. Benjamin Pike & Sons as painter of screens for magic lanterns, in which art he is a superior hand. To perfect himself in a certain branch of his calling, he went to Europe in July, 1853, and visited Hungary while there in order to make inquiries respecting the character and connections of a Hungarian refugee named Zagony, who had been anxious to form an intimate connection with his family.

For this purpose he bore a letter of introduction from Zagony to his pretended connections, the contents of which, as it was written in a language unknown to him, can only be conjectured from the fact that on presenting the letter he was immediately thrown into prison, tried, and condemned to ten years imprisonment at hard labor, without permission to communicate in any manner with his family and friends, nor with the American Consul. By means of a note dropped upon the road, and fortunately found by some one who conveyed it to the American consul, he contrived to communicate his situation to his family in New York, who now await, in the deepest distress and destitution, the result of their repeated appeals to the American Government.

RUSSIA DRAINING ENGLAND OF GOLD.—The Philadelphia Ledger remarks that it is a curious fact that the blockade of the Russian harbors, so far from reducing the exports of Russia, has only diminished the capacity of England to pay for those exports otherwise than in gold. This extraordinary result has been brought about by the Russians shipping their hemp, hides, tallow, &c. from Prussian ports, while they have not received in exchange, as formerly, their raw cotton, coffee and sugar from the London merchants. Thus while England has received thirty-five million dollars worth of Russian produce since the commencement of the war, she has given Russia but six millions worth of goods in return. For all these articles from Russia, England has been obliged, of course, to pay double prices, so that besides being unable to barter off her own ordinary share of tropical products for the productions of her enemy, she is compelled to contract nearly twice as great a debt as usual in order to obtain the quantity of Russian articles she requires. She is therefore obliged to disburse gold to an unprecedented amount, and thus furnishes the Czar with those very sinews of war in which he is most deficient. The Ledger says:

This condition of affairs is attracting the attention of the British press. Many journals are even calling for a return to the old practice of seizing enemies goods in neutral bottoms. The large quantities of lead shipped to Prussian Ports and thence carried into Russia to be manufactured into musket balls, has particularly exasperated the British press. Yet what is to be done? It will scarcely do for England to retract from her late decision, with respect to free ships making free goods, especially as the treaty between the United States and Russia pledges this country, in a measure, to enforce that doctrine in regard to our own marine. It will answer but little better to make war with Prussia, for other avenues for Russian hemp and tallow will open. The truth is that England is in what is technically called 'a fix' in reference to this matter, and will probably have to pay Russia, as long as the war lasts, from twenty to twenty-five millions of dollars in specie, for necessary tallow, wheat and hemp. In other words, the Czar will get out of her every year enough to keep a small army in the field. Such are some of the odd results of war when waged between a military and commercial power."

DEATH OF A REMARKABLE WOMAN.—A female named Jeanne De Lux, died in New York a few days ago, from injuries received by being run over by an omnibus. She was 65 years of age, and the Journal of Commerce thus speaks of her:

The assessors of the city tolls always encountered in her a most reluctant tax-payer, and piteous appeals were made to their clemency; for, to all appearances, she was in great pecuniary distress, living in a secluded apartment in an upper story, with a scanty supply of antique wearing apparel and rickety furniture, denying herself the ordinary comforts of life. In consideration of her extreme poverty and oath, she was last year assessed for only $10,000, though the house she occupied and owned, was well worth $25,000. The bureau of the Public Administrator now shows that she owned bonds to the value of $80,000, making her entire property at least $100,000. She is not known to have had any relatives in this country, except a nephew residing in Cincinnati. When inquired of as to what disposition she intended to make of her property, she said she meant to build a splendid hospital. After all she died without leaving any will, though often urged to prepare one. Old Madame De Lux, though of French origin, was remarkably fluent in English Billingsgate, when her accustomed equanimity was disturbed.—Once she was brought before the criminal court charged with stealing a neighbor's cap; but Mr. O'Connor as defendant, got the case. Altogether, her life has been of varied experience, and it may some day serve to "point a moral or adorn a tale."

FOREIGN EMIGRATION FROM NEW YORK TO EUROPE, is the novel title of an article in the New York Courier, in which it shows there have emigrated from that port to Europe since the first of May, up to the 14th of November, five months and a half, no less than 8.797 persons. This does not include the shipments of one or two packet lines, statements of which the editors have been unable to obtain for this article. Probably, he adds, the whole immigration numbers 12,000. The cause is said to be want of employ here, and the war in the East needing men, &c. It further adds:

"Many others, who have been in America many years, and have accumulated small fortunes now return to their former homes to 'settle' for the remainder of their lives. This is especially the case with many who return to Great Britain and Ireland, the act of Parliament in relation to encumbered estates being understood to afford much encouragement to small farmers. Still others from the Continent, laboring under the embarrassment of not understanding our language, soon become discouraged and return. In this position are the French mechanics and laborers who are constantly sailing from this port to Havre. It is said that the know nothing movement has had the effect to drive back, in disgust a large number of the better class of foreigners. And many go out to bring their friends back in the spring. Very many are also sent by Commissioners of Emigration for various reasons—principally advanced age, impaired general health or inability to provide for themselves."

KANSAS FOR SLAVERY.—The most brazen of the false prophets who have been lulling the people of the North into a false security and fatal inaction by voluble and confident assurances that Slavery could never gain a foothold in Kansas, must change color at the news from that Territory now flying across the country. The first battle has been fought, and victory perches on the flag of Human Bondage. Gen. Joseph W. Whitfield, a Federal office-holder, unequivocally and openly favorable to legalizing Slavery in Kansas, has been chosen her Delegate to Congress, and chosen on the Slavery issue. True, he has been some years in the region, and was vaunted "the Squatters candidate," which doubtless gained him some votes; Mr. R. P. Flenniken, his antagonist, being a very recent immigrant; but the main question was Slavery or No Slavery, and Slavery has triumphed. Doubtless it was helped by a large immigration, for the week, from Missouri and perhaps Arkansas; but that which the slaveholders have done once, they may and probably will do again when the decisive struggle on the election of Delegates to a Territorial Legislature shall take place; and for this we see no remedy. If Gov. Reeder shall postpone this election till next June, we may hope for a better result; but if not, there is scarcely a chance. We believe there are this hour four chances that Kansas will be a Slave State to one that she will be Free.

Where now are the Claytons and Edward Everetts, the Oldses and Bird Chapmans, who proclaimed the whole struggle against Douglas' bill a fight for an abstraction, and declared that Kansas was secured to Freedom by her climate, her soil, and her geographical position? Where are the followers and disciples of these prophesiers of smooth things?

"There ye, wise saints! behold your light, your star!
Ye would be dupes and victims, and ye are!"

What becomes, moreover, of the sneers at the Kansas Emigration Society? From the Kansas papers which have lately reached us, printed a few days before the election, we learn that the chief settlement of the emigration (Wakarusa—Lawrence) was the focus and stronghold of whatever resistance was made to the Slave Power.—Had there been half a dozen Wakarusas instead of one, the result would have been gloriously different.

What is to be done? Kansas was legally shielded against the inroads of Slavery for thirty years preceding the last. There were some slaves held there, but they were held in bondage without law and against law, like captives on a pirate ship. The moment the Territory was organised and provided with a Judiciary, every slave could have been liberated on habeas corpus or some other summary process, if the Nebraska bill of last session had simply said nothing about Slavery. The victory just achieved for Slavery is the second act of the drama lately begun in Congress under the leadership of Senator Douglas. The third act, directly and positively legalizing Slavery in Kansas, remains to be played next season. We fervently hope that the catastrophe may be averted, but the chances are decidedly against us. It will not be by insolence, by caviling, by empty predictions that the matter will take care of itself, that Freedom for Kansas is to be achieved, but by earnest resolution and energetic struggle.—N. Y. Trib.

LOW WATER AT NEW ORLEANS.—There are two things which war against the growth and welfare of New Orleans; one, the annual recurrence of yellow fever—the other, the periodical return of low water.

Just at present, says the Crescent, the city is free from fever, and will continue so for the ensuing eight months, but the other and not lesser evil abides with us and seems determined to protract its stay beyond all anticipation if not all antecedent. For more than six months the Father of Rivers has been shriveled and dried up between his banks, and all those lesser streams that contribute to his volume from St. Anthony's to Red River, have run between diminished banks. Drought and dryness has been the incessant report from the up country. Steamboats grounded, snagged and laid up for a rise have been returned to us until we are satiated and begin to long for heavy rains and swelling streams. One year ago to-day there were nine large boats passing out of the mouth of the Ohio on their way to this city. To-day there is not one. The Cumberland, the White and Red Rivers, with numberless others, are closed to trade. The commonest articles of export and import between Louisville and this place reach us through New York, and are similarly returned. Trade is entirely at an end in many directions, and nothing but patience like that of Job can be called in to lessen the attendant evils.—How long this will continue those only can say to whom

"Coming events
Cast their shadow before."

The Chicago Press says: "The Merchants and Mechanics' Bank of this city resumed business yesterday after a suspension of some three weeks. We make the announcement with a degree of gratification that we cannot well express, because the fact will go far towards restoring confidence in the country, and have a favorable effect upon the stringent condition of money affairs."
