the most of a bail cause, and we cannot but regret that he has wasted his abilities in support of what is indefensible on the ground of truth, and is irreconcilable with individual as well as general, civil, religious and political rights.

Mr. Chandler's argument is a defence of the Catholic church against the statement of Mr. Banks of Massachusetts, contained in the following paragraph -

It is a current belief that the Pope, the head of the Roman Church, who stand as the Vicar of God, and is invested with his attributes of in-fallibility, is not only supreme in matters of faith, fallibility, is not only supreme in matters of faith, but has also a temporal power that can not only control Governments, but, in fatting exigencies, may absolve his disciples from their allegiance. Lam aware, sir, that this is disputed ground.—But it is a well-attested historical fact that often, in times past, the claim to secular power has been made; and I am yet to learn, that by the Pope, or any general council speaking with his acquiescence—the only authorized exponents of the true faith—that this claim has ever yet been disavowed. If has not next done in secular as in sacred affairs, that he can absolve men from their relations with others not of the true faith, it is not trange that men should hesitate in supit is not strange that men should hesitate in sup-port of his followers." In reply this, Mr. CHANDLER states the question raised, and asserts his emphatic denial of it, in the most emphatic manner, in the following

"The question raised by the gentleman from tassachusetts is one of political power, and that imagine, is the leading objection to Catholics ad Catholicity with gentlemen who venture on I imagine, is the leading objection to Carbolics and Catholicity with gentlemen who venture on the dangerous movement of dragging religion in the dangerous movement of dragging religion in to the political areas. Mr. Chairman, I deny that the Bishop of Rome has, or claims for himself, the right to interfere with the political reason. Mr. Chairman, I deny that the Bishop of Rome has, or claims for himself, the right to conceal any point—I mean that I dony to the Bishop of Rome the right resulting from his divine office to interfere in the relation between subjects and their sovereigns. I make this denial, I acknowledge all my obligations to the church of which I am an humble membered it schildren, and I desire that no part of what I may say, or what I may conced in my remarks, may be considered as yielding a claim of the Catholic Church, or manifesting on my part a desire to explain away, to sult the spirit of the times, or the prejudices of my hearers, any dectrine of the Catholic Church, or manifesting on my part a desire to explain away, to sult the spirit of the times, or the prejudices of my hearers, any dectrine of the Catholic Church, or manifesting on my part a desire to explain away, to sult the spirit of the times, or the prejudices of my hearers, any dectrine of the Catholic Church, or manifesting on my part a desire to explain away, to sult the spirit of the times, or the prejudices of my hearers, any dectrine of the Catholic Church, or more proposal to the control of the capture of the Catholic Church, or more proposal to the control of the capture of the Catholic Church, or more proposal commas, but I am not bound by the imputations of its opponents. I am not bound by the imputations of its opponents. I am not bound by the imputations of its opponents. I am not bound by the capture of the command its exercise, in general, only the assertions of those who would make political capital out of denunciations of her cred. Nay, more, sir; and I ask the attention of gentlemen to my dissowal. I am not bound

Here is broad ground taken; the most explicit demal of the temporal and political power of the Pope in countries out of his own jurisdiction as a temporal sovereign, coupled with the fullest ession of entire adherence to the teachings expression of entire adherence to the teaching, and dogmas of the church. On this statement try Mr. Chandler by the dogmas and decrees of the church in which he so profoundly believes and trusts.

- To prove his position he quotes from the late England, Bishop of Charleston, whose views, he says, have been approved of by Dr. Kenrick, Bishop of Baltimore, and by Archbishop Hughes. We prefer to go nearer Reme for our knowledge of the teachings and dogmas of Romanism. We are well aware that Rome allows of great latitude of expression, and of equivocation when the church can be benefited thereby, and unless Mr. Chandler can reconcile the dilutions of the church can be benefited thereby, and unless Mr. Chandler can reconcile the dilutions of American Bishops, made to suit the weak stomach's of American Catholies, with the trong meat of Bellarmine and Liguori, we must pat aside his proofs for the infallable teachings of the chair of 5t. Peter.

Romanism requires of its votaries complete submission to the infallable teachings of the Pope. There can be no questioning, no reasoning, no hesitation, without incurring the damnable sin of heresy. Complete and unreverved obedience is required to the teachings of the church. The judgment and the conscience are unreservedly given up to the control of the Confessor, or Director, and the true Catholic is thus, in every thing pertaining to religion and morals, and ecclesiastical government, as completely the slave of the church and the Confessor, as the dumb brute, who has neither soul or reconscience. This is strong language, but it is used not without deliberation, and with foll faith in its truth. We do not think it will be denied, but if it is we will give our proofs. How much liberty, then, does a man possess, of independent political action, after his moral nafure is thus subjected so completely to the will, of another I. It is offly necessary for the Church, or the Bishop, or the Priest, to express his will, fortified by his absolute power as a spiritual director, to control every Catholic officer in the State—that make a control of the properties of the church, or the Bishop, or the Priest, to express his will, fortified by his absolute power as a spiritual director, to control every Catholic voter in the land, and every Catholic officer in the State—that make a control of the properties, to copress his will, fortified by his absolute bondage.

We speak of dooirines, togamas and power—not of their practice. How far Romanism is an forced on its votaries we cannot say. We Amanicannot be free whose moral and intellectual nature is held in such absolute bondige.

We speak of dooirines, dogmas and power—not of their practice. How far Romanism is anforced on its votaries we cannot say. We doubt not that its terrible oppression is comparatively but lightly felt by its adherents hero.—We do not believe that very many American Cathelies have been made even acquainted with all the detestible doctrines, and the imperious demands of Rome. There is policy in this, and the accredited teachings of her canonized go to the decrees of Councils, the Bulls of Poess, and the accredited teachings of her canonized Doctors to ascertain her horrible deprayity, and her grinding oppression; and to the countries such in ignorance and greaning under the fierceness of Catholic rule, to acquire a correct knowledge of the real character of Romanism. Romanism presses, as yet, but lightly upon her votaries here, and as a consequence we find among us good Catholic citizens, men of true piety and ideas. Living among Protestants, associating with Protestants, surrounded with Protestant in Ruences, they imperceptibly acquire Protestant to them all that Rome teachers dare not reveal to them all that Rome teachers dare not reveal to them all that Rome teachers dare not reveal to the mall that Rome teachers dare not reveal to them all that Rome teachers dare not reveal to them all that Rome teachers dare not reveal to the mall that Rome teachers dare not reveal to the mall that Rome teachers dare not reveal to the mall that Rome teachers dare not reveal to the resigning of Nero, Julian, Valens, or the like: physical force was stity, tolerated, or now tolerates, and here depondence.
