The testimony in the case was here closed.

Mr. Stanton, for the defence, asked the Court to charge the Jury according to the three following propositions:

First.—That the defendants being in possession of the premises described in the writ, the law presumes that possession to be lawful and the presumes that possession to be larger plaintiffs cannot recover in this action, without showing a better title in themselves either legal

Second—That the plaintiffs have shown no lefeeting the present unit present unit present unit of the jury. Having concluded his historical statement, he remarked, substantially, that the division of the church which gave rise to the present controversy was unfortunate. It was unpleasant to behold differences in the church of the old Covenanters—many of whom, in other days, had sealed their faith with their blood and won crowns of martyrdom. This separation, however, may have been an ordering of Providence; it may be that the churches have done more good divided, than had they been united. There can be no doubt that both parties wereconscientions in all that they did. But it is not for the Court to decide as to the merits of either of the parties.

for the Court to decide as to the merits of either of the parties:

The question before the Court is simply this—
Have these plaintiffs shown a title to the property either legal or technical? The deed conveying the ckurch property (on Plum Alley) was made to certain trustees and their successors to have and hold that property as the Reformed Presbyterian congregation of Pittsburgh. Admitting that the deed has descended to the trustees; the deed is to the Reformed Presbyterian congregation of Pittsburgh. The plaintiffs to not hold, this title; they are the Reformed Presbyterhan congregation of Pittsburgh and Allegheny. That is not the same congregation to which the deed was made;—that is a seperate and distinct organ-But it is said they have the equitable title. But it is said they have the equitable title. It is contended that they contributed something to the re-crection of the church in 183—. That does not give them any right to an undivided regreer of the property. Some of them were members of that congregation but they voluntarily withdrew. So they have no equitable title. The jury must therefore bring in a verdict for the defendants. The first, second and third propositions submitted by defendants counsel are affirmed.

ARREST FOR PASSING COUNTERFEIT MOREY.

A man named Jacob Von Danekin was arrested on Wednesday by the Mayor's police, on a charge of passing a counterfeit $20 hill on William Howe, proprietor of an Oyster Saloon on St. Clair street. Mr. Howe alleges that the accused bought a dollar's worth of oysters, and presented as $20 hill. After some hesitation, he gave him $19 in change. Subsequently he discovered the bill to be tad, and making information at the Mayor office, the nolice proceeded, to the dopot bill to be had, and making information at the Mayor office, the police proceeded, to the depot of the Pennsylvania Railroad where they arrested Yon Danokin, who was just starting eastward. He had a hearing before Mayor Volz on Thursday, and was committed.

The First Day of the First Sour House.

At eleven o'clock on Thursday forencon, the doors of a Soup House were thrown open on Seventh street above the Canal Bridge. A throng of applicants had gathered around the door, each one bearing a pitcher, pan or kettle for receiving his or her share of the boiling hot soup —rich, savory, excellent, proper soup. The good lady into whose hands has been entrusted the preparation of the nutritious fluid, stood beside the great kettle ready to ply the ladic with impartial hand. The work of distribution began, and ere two o'clock, fifty-six gallons of soup had been distributed amongst eighty applicants, and most of these had, in addition, received a smile of the first of the f

BURGLARY.—The house of Mr. William Derby, on Ohio street, Allegheny was entered by burglars, on Tuesday night, and $75 in gold and silver taken, together with a quantity of jewelry and clothing. The robbers obtained admission by cutting a hole in the back kitchen door, near the fastening, and removing the bolt. They first proceeded to the sleeping room of Mr. Derby, after carefully searching the chamber they locked the door, and proceeded very leisurely to ransack the remainder of the house. Mr. Derby hearing the noise of their operation got up, but finding he was unable to get out of the room, raised a window and called for assistance. Several of the neighbors came, but unfortunately endeavored to enter by way of the front deep; while they were trying to force this open, the ranscals decamped by the back door.—Post.
