As we pass up to riper years we find the door to sin and crime opened wider and wider, until we start back aghast at the awful gulf of iniquity revealed.

Indication and its Results.—Our articles on the subject of Immigration, and its results in strengthening the North against the South, have attracted the attention of a correspondent of the Casion (O.) Repository. He undertakes to answer them, and is so well convinced of his success that he thinks we dare not attempt to controvert him.

The great argument on which this correspondent relies is, that the vote of the foreign population in the North has been given to the support of pro-slavery men and measures. He admits that the foreign element settles in the north, and contributes to the numerical preponderance of the free States; but contends that its vote in the support two and a half to three and a half feet on a lightway even from the shortest distances, was included in the shortest distances. It is well known that the very object of the Know Nothings in asking for this change in the naturalization laws is to check the tide of immigration. It is not simply to keep them from gration. It is not simply to keep them from youing, but to keep them out, altogether, that 'they aim at. This is the burden of their arguments:—we have too many of them now, and we must stop any more from coming.
