There is no authentic account of the crew and barengers—25 crow, and 185 passengers. A letter, indeed, says that all wore lost. The cargo crew and in the only particulars of this sad event, that we have found, are contained in the following paragraph:

The notification that the Car had given orders by telegraph to Prince Gortschakoff at Vienna to accept the four conditions demanded by France, England and Austria, with the interpretation placed upon them reached Loudon five days ago. It produced a considerable effect on all the markets, which would have been increased but for the bad fame that now prevents any word of Russis having the weight of a statement from a respectable source.

It appears that after Prince Gortschakoff had been informed of the terms to which his master would be required to submit, he endeavored to recopen the matter by fresh arguments. To he has never yet been able to see, (unless his eyes have at length been opened) that it is fatal to speak of concessions at all, except when the mind is made up to offer them promptly, and thus stop the danger by which they have been necessitated. After all his threats about defending Holy Russis, we now see him treating for peace with the armies not only of England and France, but also of despised Turkey, encamped upon his soll.

With regard to the actual progress of hostilities, there is nothing of much importance to detail in the-way of actual incident, but nature appear to be approaching a crisis at Sebastopol, and this is suggested by some persons at a probable cause of the change, of tone at St. Peters-

Our letters state that the English and French ambassadors have written to their governments for instructions, and, should it be necessary, for the necessary powers to treat. Such are the facts; five are well informed, and they are not the proportions which the imagination of news makers at once attributed to them. They compared the proportions which the imagination of news allies, a great moral success. It is already an enormous step to have brought English of Sentinger.

But the question which cocupies every mind at present is to know if we are neare to peas.

To that question only one man can reply, and he is the Empioror Nicholas.

If he be sincere, if the declarations of his ambassador do not conceal any duplicity, if the nor gotistions he asked, for sincerely, and will be carried on in the same spirit, peace may issue from the conferences to be perhaps opened at Vienna But is there not some snare in the offerso of Prince Gortschakoff. At Hamburg the whole of the lower part of the town was under water, and the freight among the inhabitants nearly equalled that of the great fire.
