Exciting reports are not uncommon on election day, anywhere; but they are generally regarded as is ide and unworthy of attention. Nothing that a predetermination to improve the opportunity offered by such reports and a pre-arrangement to resort to violence, could have precipitated such results as it has been the mournful task of the press to chronicle in this case. The difficulty was in the bad and lawless spirit that could be excited to violence by such reports.

But the reports were evidently manufactured for the occasion. They seem to have been more in the Louisville Journal we find an account cally was in the bed and iswiess spirit that could be excited to violence by such reports.
