It was, however, and Iredell, preferring to remain a Whig, had not taken the necessary oaths to entitle his pretensions to any consideration. Our respected cotsuporary of the Cornentour Telegroph, thinks it 'a little strange that Mr. Iredell, who was born in the county, as were his ancestors for several generations, and had realed for some thirty years in Norristown, where he had always enjoyed the respect of his fellow citizens—with the was possible, to fill such an office." The man was a Whig, and was not that sufficient to shut him out?"

We have no special acquaintance with the euphonious name of McGlathery; but we know that in times past there was not to be found in Pennsylvania a more thoroughly servile set of conglifices than his whilom associates in Montgomery county before he found himself more at home among the Know Nothings.

A vast amount of labor is now expending to induce outside anti-slavery men to believe that their only safety is in co-operating with the Know-Nothings.
