If there is any sense self-respect in the deceived press, he and his worthless book will be whistled down the wind

The Washington Union, in an editorial article on the position of the Democratic party on the clavery question, uses the following language:— "That so party embracing members at the North and the South can be national or harmonious in its organization which does not exclude the queson of slavery from its creed!" No party has ever yet existed, since the Slavery question became prominent, that has been able to exclude the question of Slavery from its creed. The pretence might have been made of do ing so, but all the while practical aid and comfort was furnished to the Slave interest. The Slave very question is one which cannot be excluded from Lational politics; and the party that under takes to do it will soon find itself a wreck.
