Reading Matter on each page of this paper

The New York Tribune, some days since, published a paragraph in reference to Gov. Johnston, of this city, of which the substantial part was as follows:

"In 1850 Gov. Johnston of Pennsylvania was an ardent Free-Soil Whig, and honorably hostile to the Compromise which Mr. Webster and Mr. Fillmore brought upon the country. All parties respected him, and the North relied on him as a man of conviction and backbone. But last week at Philadelphia we find him voting for the Pro-Slavery platform, framed by negro-drivers and doughfaces, by which it is forbidden to touch the existing laws on Slavery or to attempt by any political action to secure Kansas and Nebraska for Freedom!!"

The Tribune of Tuesday last says it has received from Gov. Johnston a note warmly denying that at the Know-Nothing Grand Council he voted for the Pro-Slavery Platform there adopted, in which that gentleman thus speaks:

"I did not vote for said platform and do not intend to hereafter. I opposed it in Convention, spoke against its adoption in the Convention, protested against it and refused all co-operation with any National organization that recognized or adopted it. I am now what I have been—a firm and consistent opponent of Slavery extension."

To this the Tribune adds its pleasure at such a statement and says:

"We were led into the belief that Gov. Johnston had really voted for the Pro-Slavery Platform from finding in the Pittsburgh Gazette's statement to that effect credited to the N. Y. Times."

Our name having thus been brought into the matter, we have searched our files to see if we had given currency to such a statement, either from the New York Times or any other source; and having satisfied ourselves that no such matter ever appeared in our columns, we have to ask the Tribune to do justice to us as well as to Gov. Johnston. While placing itself right, let it not do us a wrong. We have so much confidence in the candor and fair-dealing of the Tribune that we feel assured it will haste to relieve us from the imputation of having misstated the position of our fellow-citizen.

The main history of what was done in the K. N. Convention at Philadelphia, as published by us, was drawn from the columns of the Tribune. Subsequent to the adjournment of that body we extracted some additional items from other papers, but none of the tenor referred to by the Tribune. The only extract from the N. Y. Times published in our columns in reference to Gov. Johnston, was as follows:

"The Executive Know Nothing Committee of the State of Pennsylvania have considered the protest signed by a number of Pennsylvania delegates, and published in this morning's Times, and decided against the delegates and in favor of the action of the Council."

This was a telegraphic dispatch to the Times. In our article accompanying this extract a quotation was given from another New York paper, giving an account of what was done in the Convention on the 14th, which ran thus:

"Gov. Johnston, of Pennsylvania, entered his protest as to the power of the council to erect a platform; but as one had been erected, he would submit to the State Council for its action, and would battle manfully for the cause."

From this we drew the inference that Gov. Johnston had pledged himself to battle manfully for the cause, even if the majority platform should be endorsed.

But in all this there is not the slightest hint, much less a direct allegation, that Gov. Johnston had voted for the majority platform. We were well aware of the fact that he voted against the majority resolutions; and we have been careful, from the very start of this business, to lay no charge at that gentleman's door which had not a substantial foundation to rest upon.

When Gov. Johnston says that he opposed the majority platform in the Convention, spoke against it, and voted against it, he says what is perfectly true and well known; but he leaves unsaid what is of as much importance for the public to know. He neglects to add that he voted also against the minority platform, and that his whole course was bent to secure the total ignorement of the slavery question. He wished, in this great crisis of the country's affairs, when the welfare of the nation hangs upon the proper settlement of the great issue of Slavery, to treat the slavery question as if it had no existence—to pass it by as unworthy of an American's notice and make Nativism, with all its proscriptive and soul-narrowing tendencies the great and all-absorbing question of the day. This was practically his position. He voted for Kenneth Rayner's proposition, which thrust the Slavery question out of view altogether; he voted against the minority resolution, which denounced the repeal of the Missouri Compromise; and for the same reason he voted against the majority platform, because the resolutions of both the majority and minority were a departure from his cherished policy of giving the slavery question the go-by. These are the facts, and fortunately we are not left in doubt respecting them. The record, as published by authority of the Council, states the vote of the Pennsylvania delegation as follows, on the three propositions that were brought to a vote:

	Rayner's Proposition.	Majority Platform.	Minority Platform.
J. R. Bell	aye	no	no
C. D. Freeman	no	aye	no
William F. Johnston	aye	no	no
R. Coulter, Jr.	aye	no	no
R. A. Lamberton	aye	no	no
D. E. Small	aye	no	no
F. A. Vanclove	aye	aye	no

The substance of Rayner's proposition we have given above; the majority platform our readers are familiar with; the minority platform was as follows:

Resolved, That the repeal of the Missouri Compromise was an infraction of the plighted faith of the Nation, and it should be restored; and if efforts to that end shall fail, Congress should refuse to admit any State tolerating Slavery which shall be formed out of any portion of the Territory from which that institution was excluded by that Compromise.

Against this resolution Gov. Johnston recorded his emphatic No! along with the rest of the Pennsylvania delegation; and such a vote, under any circumstances, can never be reconciled with professions of hostility to slavery extension, no matter how fervently or indignantly made.

The protest of Gov. Johnston and a portion of his colleagues against the adoption of the majority platform we have already published. It does not condemn that platform because of its inherent wrongfulness, but because it meddled with the Slavery question at all. It leads off thus:

"The undersigned, citizens of the United States and residents of the States set opposite their names, solemnly protest against the introduction of any question connected with Slavery into the platform of principles of the American party—believing convinced that no such issues were intended to be embraced within its purposes and objects."

Besides this, Gov. Johnston remained with the majority, instead of seceding with the minority, and preferred to retain a brotherhood with the South, which constituted the bulk of what remained in the Council after the secession, to affiliating with those who had cast off southern shackles. His right to do this no one questions, but when he assumes an offended air at having his anti-slavery consistency questioned, it is but right that all the facts should be fully known.

We have felt it to be our duty, on account of the article in Tuesday's Tribune, not only to ask this journal to place us right before our readers with reference to Gov. Johnston, but to group together all the facts which bear upon that gentleman's position. In these days, when men are classifying themselves anew, and seeking out a change of political associations for themselves, we are not content to let any partial statement of facts pass current as a whole without adding what is essential to its completion.

The Louisville Journal, before the meeting of the K. N. National Council, was very moderate in its tone on the Slavery question, deprecated the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, and even went so far as to suggest the basis of a new compromise between the North and the South for the settlement of all issues between them. Since then, and since its editor has returned fresh from the inspiration of the Philadelphia National Council, the paper has become intensely pro-slavery. It seizes every opportunity to extenuate, defend and glorify the peculiar institution; rails at the North with the true Southern froth on its lips: and bids fair to out-Herod Herod in its new career. Such is one of the first fruits of National Know Nothingism.

The Baltimorean was formerly a whig paper but is now a Know Nothing organ, and is published at the residence of Governor Pollock. It publishes, with great display of type, the proceedings of the ratification K. N. meetings held in New York and Philadelphia, to which the pro-slavery platform of the majority is attached, and accompanies it with this hearty endorsement:

"We think that no party in this country ever put forth such a nobly-inspired platform of political faith as is expressed in this declaration of American Principles.

The platform expresses the sentiments of the American citizens of Pennsylvania, and they will meet a genial and cordial response from all the members of that patriotic organization in the Old Keystone."

We have no doubt, from the course of this and other papers in that region, that the whole tier of counties along the upper Susquehanna will endorse the platform. The central counties and those on the Maryland line, will do the same; and the proceedings at Easton show what is to be expected from the counties on the Delaware.

The Changes which are Going on.—The Cincinnati Gazette, an acknowledged Know Nothing Organ, now admits the propriety of discarding every other issue, until "the great battle for freedom is fought." It says:

"The day has gone by for negatives and noncommittalism. We require men who have points, and platforms which have life. We are not thickening about mere pin-points which require a microscope to discover them, or of rainbow shades of difference; let them blend like colors of the same, until they produce one beautiful harmony of design, and become the bow of promise for the political regeneration of the State. The strength of the intelligent men of Free States has been made a mockery and a by-word in the old wife sort of squabbles which have heretofore divided them. We must unite upon great issues, and leave the minor matters to sort for themselves. Our platform must be a broad and simpleone, without crossbars or toll-gates to interupt free access to it. There must be nothing equivocal, and yet nothing nice. The contest this fall is to be won upon the platform of common sense. Both fear and hardihood, cowardice and presumption, are to be discarded.

The leading ideas of the people of Ohio, upon State and National matters, are these: a thorough reform in our State Policy, and a firm resistance the extension of slavery by the general government. Let the men who have everything at stake in the coming election, who expect to have their taxes reduced, their commercial facilities increased, the rights of the Free States maintained, and their wrongs vindicated, stand as a unit by the Republican movement, and victory, certain and overwhelming, will perch upon our standard."

The Toledo Blade, which sympathised with the Know-Nothing movement until of late, now takes very proper and safe ground for the defence of freedom, in the following article:

"We have frequently been asked the question, If the northern Know Nothings did fight, in rebelling, why not unite and co-operate with them? That we will, and ought to do, just so far as we can agree. But to go in and nominate a Know Nothing Governor or President, that is another thing. In the first place a large proportion of Northern Know Nothings still adhere to the Pro-Slavery platform. In the next place we have not heard of the abolition of the Third Degree obligation, which proscribes their own fellow citizens, and makes of the Third Degree members a great conspiracy against the rest of the world. In the next place we have seen no policy indicated by the Order for the protection of the whole subject of immigration that is statesmanlike, wise, just or politic. On the contrary, the policy as far as divulged is calculated to repel the best of the foreign immigration, while the worst is sure to inundate us in any event. Lastly, we believe that the crisis has at last arrived when "NEITHER IS NORTH," but that if the people mean with all the means is clogged and burdened with the Know Nothing issues, it will prove abortive, and when we have overwhelming strength, we shall be beaten. All the dominant national party want and pray for is that the antagonists may be under the lead and organisation of Know Nothings. They feel and know that in that event they have a new lease of power, and an additional four years enjoyment of the emoluments, while its faithful ally the slave power, can proceed in the multiplication of slave states.

These are our reasons for not hurling up our hat in approval of what is questionable or wrong because they have done one thing which challenges the admiration of men.

Our counsel would be to all right thinking men, to quit all lodges and associations, Know Nothings, Know Somethings, Sag Nichts, and merge themselves with a great Republican people.

Kansas.—Things are gathering to a head in that territory. Liberty will soon be crushed out or it will be compelled to struggle for existence. A letter to the New York Times, contains the following extract, which contains information portentous of coming troubles:

"There is but little superficial excitement along the border—a stranger passing through would scarce discover any. But if any one will look below the surface, as he may do by conversing freely with Pro-Slavery and Anti-Slavery men, he will discover that the feeling is deep and determined on both sides. The Missourians, and other emigrants from the Slave States, look upon these sent there by the aid societies as worse than brigands and pirates, while the latter look upon the former as reckless, bloody-minded enemies of human freedom. It is obvious enough that these two classes can never be harmonized. A social war is the inevitable result of their contrast of opinion and sentiment. That war is now in progress. It is for the present only a war of words, but it will be accelerated within a twelvemonth, into a war of riots, and this will again necessarily be aggravated into a war involving the whole of the two parties. Whether this conflict, bloody and unsparing as it must become, will involve the States of the Union, time alone can determine.

When the Legislature of Kansas assembles on the first Monday in July, you will see that I have not exaggerated. That body is overwhelmingly Pro-slavery, and it will enact many laws hard for Northern men to swallow. Property in slaves will be distinctly recognised and rigidly protected; seditious publications will be suppressed and all Free Soil papers will be defined to be seditious; and an oath will be required of every voter to support the Constitution of the United States, and add in the full execution of the Fugitive Slave Law. All this my informant assures me has been resolved upon already. How much time has been resolved upon already. How much further the Legislature will go is as yet uncertain. If the emigrants from Northern States submit to these acts of legislation, of course they give up the question of Slavery. If they do not not what will be the result? It must be such as I have herein anticipated. The emigrants from the South are fully determined to execute these acts to the letter, and they are prepared to execute them vi et armis.

There is reason also to believe that the emigrants from the North are preparing for the ultima ratio. Such are the plain tendencies of things here. They cannot be arrested prior to the next session of Congress. Can they be arrested then? I turn with alarm from the veil of the future, and await with painful solicitude the moment when it shall be raised.

Governor Reeder is now here. He will leave this evening for Kansas. I saw him yesterday—he seemed to be in good spirits. It is, nevertheless, extremely doubtful whether he will be permitted to resume the duties of his office without opposition. The Southern portion of the population are deeply exasperated against him, and some of them are animated by an intense personal hatred. The slightest indiscretion on his part may produce a catastrophe too shocking to think of with composure. Of his personal safety we can only speak with vague hope,—it is impossible to feel any confidence.

The Weekly Cycle is the name of a new paper just started at West Newton, Pa., by O. H. Harrison. It seems to be well conducted, and betokens a good spirit.

OUR BOOK TABLE.

Blackwood's Magazine, for June, presents a very interesting table of contents. Among the articles which will command attention are: "The Rev. Charles Kingsley," "Aland: the Battle in 1854," "The Story of the Campaign," &c.

"Nicholas Nickleby: by Charles Dickens. Philadelphia: published by T. B. Peterson, 102 Chestnut st." This is an old friend returned to see us. Every person who has ever read Nicholas Nickleby cherishes a lively recollection of its many sterling qualities. This is a cheap edition, got up for the million. For sale by Miner & Co. The Warren (Pa.,) Mail repudiates the majority K. N. platform, manfully, and without reserve. This makes the second instance of the kind that has come to our knowledge, and only the second.

An Old Bird.—As some masons were effecting repairs in a house in Rue Mercoirre, in Lyons, France, they surprised in its nest, where it was apparently expiring from old age, a swallow having round its neck a chain bearing a little silver plate, with the following words engraved upon it:—"Ludovicus Margarite Sidele, 1749."

A Wonderful Remedy—Mr. B. D. Woods, late Justice of the Peace, East Birmingham, Pa. says:

"I have been afflicted with a disease of the stomach, palpitation of the heart, and nervous headache, for seven years, and have spent some hundreds of dollars in order to effect a cure, but all to no purpose. After having used three bottles of Parker's Hollard Bitters, I feel myself entirely restored. I can eat and sleep well, and attend to business with pleasure, and can recommend them to be beneficial to all those who are similarly afflicted."

It does not taste quite as well as your sweet-meats; but, if after a few doses you do not find your health and beauty returning, your step elastic, your whole system refreshed and invigorated like a spring morning, then your case is hopeless, and all the valuable certificates we possess, go for naught. It is the greatest purifier of the blood known; is perfectly harmless, and at the same time powerfully efficacious.

Poetry suggested by a single application of Cristadoro's Excelsior Hair Dye.

As red clouds darken in the twilight,
And blacken over heaven's blue skylight,
So Cristadoro's Hair Dye turneth
To black the hair that redly burneth.
The entire fish cunningly blackens the foam
When an enemy dirts at the queer little thing,
But an artful Cristadoro will darken the Hair,
With his Dye of all dyes most efficient and rare!

Cristadoro's Excelsior Hair Dye is a mild wholesome and reliable article, and is sold at 6 and 8 Astor House, New York, and at the sign of the Golden Mortar.
