Austria has just ordered a diminution of her forces, and no doubt exists of an understanding between her and Bussia. Anything tending to expose the hollowness of her alliance is well-comed instead of regretted by the people of France and England.

Since the above was written, intelligence has arrived from the Baltio that the allied fleet have succeeded in discovering; and destroying forty-six informal machines, which had been laid down by the Rundans in the waters before Cronstadt. They must have been placed there at great labor by the Briusa commanding omeers. Lineir errors are described as twofold—first, in not having had fascines provided for filling up the trench within the Redan; and next, in not having immediately apprised the French commander that they sound it necessary to retire. The British, on their side, say that they took the Redan, but could not hold it because the French falled to silence the guns of the Malakoff.

Lord Pammure under date, British War Department, June 20th, esps:

The French and English are proceeding with their approaches against the enemy's works, and are errecting new batteries to be armed with a damage done during the last attack. Very little fare on their part. We (allies) retain possession are made to the state of the same terms of the fare on their part. We (allies) retain possession that might be in the way some mis-
