A stockholder thought it a very actounding thing that this great lose had been going on so long without the directors knowing any thing about it. He thought that the various losses of the company were owing to the indifference and want of attention on the part of the directors.

We of the West have paid into the Treasury of the United States in direct taxation on our commerce in canal tolks for miserable accommodation, more than a million of dollars, and we have the right to sak for at least as much to give us a permanent, ample and free improvement of the falls of the Ohio. To get our rights it only needs union and determination on the part of our Representatives and their constituencies. Convinced that the movement I suggest should have its starting point from your Chamber of Commerce, I have taken the liberty of addressing you this note. I would also suggest that the most practical method of getting this matter before Congress will be to employ a civil engineer of reputation to make a minute survey of the fails during the low water of this summer, with reference to a dam, which, if practicable, will certainly furnish a better mode of transit than a canal, which can necessarially afford only

The Cincinnati Price Current has some remarks on this question which seem candid and well digested, and which we subjoin:

Ohio, Pennsylvanis, Virginis and New York, have heristofore been looked upon as the great wheat-producing States of the Union, and the result of the harvest in these, determined the settimates for the entire country. A very marked change however, has taken place within the last five years, resulting from the large breadth of lands brought into cultivation in the western States to the production of grain, where, previously, cotton was cultivated almost exclusively. While, therefore, "he crop in the four States first named is perhaps) below, and certainly not above an average there is a large increase in the western, north western, and southern States.

It is a difficult matter to determine what an average crop reduced to bushels, would amount in any State, for the reason that statistics, collected under the authority of Government, have been exceedingly defective. The yield in 1850, according to the census returns, was in round numbers 64,000,000 bushels, in the State stockholders, and now the general but, an average crop in those States is estimated at about 75,000,000 bushels. Mr. Graham then gave a description of the concert among Western men.

Mr. Graham then gave a description of the different plans for the improvement of the Falls. They were three: 1st, the improvement of the present Canal, at a cost of $2,000,000; 2d, the

This is a general impression as to the management of all railroads.

Mr. William Parsons, of Boston, wanted to have many questions answered—as to how this debleation could have happened—how it is that the conductors and other officers of the road have become rich as fast, and why the man who has robbed the corporation of $207,000 is walking the street io-day?

Considerable excitement prevailed, and the discussion was continued for some time. The meeting finally adjourned after the appointment of a committee of Investigation.
