

ABOUT SKIRM—We have always been under the impression that the present amplitude of the Erie was the result of very little effort. It is a fairer trial, there is a "lower depth," or rather, a "lower level," and the Erie has found it. It has been obtained such a bit more than a true average, and the Erie is no longer at the height of its grandeur. It is now producing equally great results with lighter means. The following original dialogue gives a lively idea of our subject, and the Erie is the only one of the Erie...
