Men who will thrust themselve into the primary meetings and Conventions of a party to which they do not belong, and while they are the sworn adherents of another, will not hesitate to sign a pledge for the purpose of accomplishing their ends. If a sense of honor, of propriety and decesor would not keep them out in the first place, they would not stop at any lower deep of infamy required of them. Al-though every member of the Convention signed a pledge that they are not and do not intend to ne Know Nothings, yet honest Democrats

They can have no assurance but from their the men. The pledge we count for nothing with men who have perseveringly and systematically denied that they were members of the order they were. How many such cases are known to almost every man in the community, and how often have we been compelled to blush for poor harmon mature when such haseness has been re pride themselves on their respectability and honno use for the purpose designed, and had in policy and in morals. If he is a man of proper self-respect, he will feel degraded by the test. If he is a decirve, the test will be of no avail in detecting him. It is a painful and most disgraceful state of affairs a painful and most disgraceful state of affairs with throws doubts about the heavesty and sincerity of any man's professions in political matters, but the blams is with those who instituted and still keep by the secret order. We know a set with the Cleveland & Fittsburgh Railroad in Pennecks with the secret order.

GREAT YFRED OF WHEAT.—Mr. Wm. Irwin of Penn township, informed us on Saturday last, that last week he threshed twelve dozen of wheat Mothings, it atrangely forgot to guard itself against another secret political order, said to be very strong. We refer to the Liquer Ascociation, which is a secret political society the object of which is to promote the repeal of the license law, and to prevent the enactment of say prohibitory law whatever. Was this oversight premeditated? If it was not, the County Committee will doubtless supply the omission.

It considers the name of William Wilkins, a "towar of strength," and Body Patterson, "one of the strongest and most whast from a lot of ground containing 4 acres, deservedly popular men in the party." We redeservedly popular men in the party." We redesired our opinions until we know more of the men composing a part of it. The nomination of Judge Wikins was rather an amusing affair.— This venerable and veteran Democrat seems to be relied upon to give strongth and respectability to the ticket, and he evinced as much coyness in accepting the honor thrust upon him, as a young and bashful maiden, when she hears the st whisper of love. He first writes a letter declining, yet leaving, as the facetious chairman remarked, a "loop-hole," through which he could march to acceptance. For very policeses, the Convention could not overlook the "loop hole," Convention could not overlook the," loop-hole," and they nominated him by acclamation. Next we find the Judge, with all that snavity which sits so gracefully upon him, before the Convention, pleading, and most pathetically "imploring on his binded kness," to be released from the honor, designed, but never loaing night of the "loop-hole," for in the same breath he speaks of the laye he bears the party, and sake the Convention with a simulity neverther.

THE MARBAS QUESTION. . This was ignored by the Convention. Notwithstanding that it is the most important issue which has ever been presented to the people of this country-notwithstanding that the rights of the free States, and of the people of the free States, have been and now are grossly assailed by ruffianly hordes of slaveholders—and notwithstanding this question is agitating the peowas as clearly pledged in honor, as a man and a suffered his name to be used, as after he signed the test. Having taken the first step, he would not be deterred by the espond. If the test was of any force is would appear that there were no Know Rothings in the Convention, for all signed it; thus showing that the Convention would have been safe without it. If there were no Know hothings there, the test was no bar to their action.

They hope by occupying the attention of obsolete issues, and unmeaning abstractions, to draw away attention from the only living political question, except the remains of Know Nothing-time that the Convention would have been safe without it. THE RESOLUTIONS.

These are a strange mess. The first two declare for the old principles, the petrifactions of the party, and for the Union. Very safe and non-committal. The third and fourth are in opposition to know Nothingism, and are clear and to the point. The fifth is non-committal and vague, and is intended to deceive somebody: who, our readers can judge after we give its history.
