

PITTSBURGH GAZETTE

The difference which is lightness will give to the appearance of a coat. A sturdy outline, for instance, which you just make out through a night glass, you know to be land-locked, rowing and dead-end. The body stands off till after midnight, and then runs in again. Towards the end of the middle watch you come on deck, and lo! far over the horizon how you behold the starry peak that tells of living men and friends. You change at the whole world. The ocean to whose solitude months may have accustomed you, has now become so wild and gloomy that you can hardly look back upon it without a shudder; while the dark horizon of the coast rises your eyes and makes you feel, especially if your vessel has been a long one, that your real dwelling place and home is on the dry land. As you continue looking, the darkness grows grey, and gradually as the dawn opens, you perceive the soft green of the hills, the grey of the world. If there is any color that has power to thrill and cheer the heart of man it is the green of the tropics first seen after a long voyage. I have fancied—when, from the strongly as to be on a great—what the light came all the fragrance of spring and all the best feeling of over-riding delight. Correspondence N. Y. Commercial.
