THE YELLOW FEVER AT NORFOLK AND PORTSMOUTH.—An Appeal to Pittsburgh.—The Board of Trade at their meeting on Monday evening passed a resolution looking to a general subscription for the relief of the hundreds of sufferers by the pestilence in Portsmouth and Norfolk. We published yesterday the names of the committee to receive subscription, and again insert them in order that any of our citizens who may desire, (and we hope that there are few who do not,) to give of their substance to aid those dying cities, may know where to deposit their offerings:

S. P. SHRIVER, 130 Second st.
WM. S. LAVELLY, 57 Wood st.
WALTER C. ROE, 257 Liberty st.
F. E. SELLERS, 209 " st.
H. L. RINGWALT, 17 Wood st.

Pittsburgh ought to feel a lively sympathy with these cities, so terribly scourged and more than decimated by the plague. We have had our share of the "pestilence that walketh by noon-day," and know from bitter experience the untold horrors of such a visitation. Pittsburgh, too, was once stricken down by a calamity more destructive to her general prosperity than even the loss of thousands of her citizens. The flames of a conflagration swept away her wealth—all the improvements and acquisitions of whole years of toil and industry—in a few short hours. In that trying hour of our history, the whole land was aroused in our behalf and hundreds of thousands of dollars came to us like blessings from heaven. They were the free-will offerings of the benevolence and sympathy of the land. Yet it seems to us that Pittsburgh should look upon those material benefactions as a sort of loan which she is bounden in all honor to repay. She has risen from her ashes and overtopped all her former greatness. She is able—amply able—to repay that loan. Is she willing? Will her citizens exhibit that noblest sentiment of the human heart—gratitude? Knowing, as we do, the character of our people, we believe that no appeal to their sympathies will pass by unheeded, and we confidently hope to see a very large subscription in aid of the sufferers at Norfolk and Portsmouth.

The condition of these cities is horrible. The like has seldom been experienced anywhere on this continent. The following extract from one of our Virginia exchanges tells a fearful story. Speaking of having received a large supply of coffins from Baltimore and Richmond, it says:

"This opportune supply has put many of our citizens in quite a cheerful mood, as it has dispated the great dread they were under recently, being uncoffined, and even unboxed, should y be so unfortunate as to fall before the unerg dart of the insatiate scourge."

Is not this horrible? Shut up in a charnel use, men are put into the "cheerful mood" by ne thought—the consolation that they will at ast have a coffin wherein may repose their reains when the scourge shall have carried them ff, as it has hundreds around them.

The following is an extract of a letter received om Norfolk:

"A poor woman wrote a note to my wife yesterday, saying her mother was dying, and her two sisters sick, and begged us to send her a loaf of bread. This we did of course. I carried it myself. I sent her some again to-day, and shall continue it, for there is not a baker in the city, and of course not a cracker or a lemon. This pestilence is best combated by nursing, and it is for the want of nursing that so many die, but when it attacks virulently, nothing will arrest it. I saw yesterday afternoon at Gibson's old shop near the academy, wagon loads of coffins from Baltimore, Richmond and Hampton, and even with cheese, it is difficult to bury the dead. Many bodies have been unburied for 48 hours, and piles of them are kept waiting at the cemeteries for graves.

We copy from another letter:

"You have doubtless read the details in the papers. I cannot attempt to give you a minute description of things among us. It is the most awfully desolating time I ever witnessed. Truly I have felt what it was to be sick at heart, because of the abounding wretchedness. Now, it is as terrible as at any time. Yesterday there were more deaths than ever in one day before.

The sympathy which has been manifested in furnishing material aid, has been most timely and effective. It is sincerely appreciated by the sadly afflicted recipients."

Will not Pittsburgh come up to the aid of these poor sufferers! Let it be done at once, and be done well.

BATTLE OF TCHERNAYA.—The reports of Generals Simpson and Pelissier state that the Russian attack on Tchernaya was a deliberate effort to raise the seige. If they had succeeded in holding the heights, they intended a further attack upon the four points. The documents found on a dead Russian general clearly indicate this. Gen. Simpson estimates the Russian force at 55,000 infantry and 6000 cavalry, with 160 guns. The French had only 12,000 men, and four batteries were engaged. The Sardinians had 4,500 men and 24 guns, and the English only one battery. The Russians advanced three times with determined bravery, and thrice carried the ridge crowning the heights, but were repulsed; their retreat was covered by the Russian batteries. Gen. Pelissier calls the French loss 1,700 officers killed and 1160 wounded; the Sardinians lost 250 killed and wounded; the Russians lost 1600 killed, 5000 wounded, and 1800 wounded prisoners. The Russians admit great losses; three of their Generals were killed. The Russians engaged in the battle has just arrived in the Crimea.

Gen. Simpson says Redan and Malakoff were bombarded on the 17th with as much effect as was anticipated.

It is reported that Gen. Simpson is ill, and that Gen. Bentick has taken command.

PORTLAND, ME., September 11.—The State election yesterday resulted as follows:—Bangor gives Morrell 1189; Wells 930 and Reed 858 majority. A majority of the Senators and Representatives are, probably anti-Republican. The election for governor has probably been close.
