PARIS GREEN; S. BRAND.
Prepared by Thomas Antisell, M. D.
THIS Celebrated Color is now acknowledged by all to be the BRIGHTEST AND MOST PERMANENT ever produced in this or any other country. It is of a delightfully rich and brilliant bright, blue shade, and the UNIVALVING UNIFORMITY of its coarser grades, the unadulterated state in which it has given whatever is used, amply testifies to its merits.
Whether in oil, water or ground in oil, put up in different grades, with a tariff of prices, will be sent to any part of the country, upon application by letter or otherwise, at the office.
The above delivered will be guaranteed to be fully equal to the sample forwarded.
All orders will be promptly attended to and faithfully executed, upon the most reasonable terms.
EDW. HOPE,
Proprietor of Paris Green, Works, 34 Jacob st., N. Y. City.

For the 1,000,000.
THE U. S. PATENT MARBLE CO.
(CAPITAL $165,000.)
No. 326 Broadway, cor. Walker st. New York.
ARE prepared to execute all orders for MANTLES, TABLETOPS, COLUMNS, PEDESTALS &c., in imitation of Roman, Brocatella, Francoli, Sienna and all fancy Marbles; equal in strength, and of more durability to real marble, and in appearance superior thereto, and at less than half the cost. Unlike marbleized iron, wood, or slate, it is wholly free from all objections which are urged against those surface work, and beauty of the article. Mantels from $5 to $40. Orders from Furniture Builders, Cabinet Makers and others solicited, and satisfaction guaranteed. Agents for the sale of the privileged class for an extension of their territory and an aggrandizement of their power. New Orleans, situated practically on the coast of the Gulf of Mexico, was already, at once an ancient slaveholding colony and an important commercial mart. It lay contiguous to the slaveholding states. Under these circumstances, it was without any resistance soon organized and admitted into the Union, with its ancient laws and customs tolerating slavery. St. Louis, though destined to acquire great commercial importance, was as yet an inconsiderable town, with few slaveholders and slaves. The Mississippi only divided it from the North-west Territory, which was already consecrated to freedom. The best interests of the country required and humanity demanded that this ordinance of 1787, should be extended across the Mississippi. The privileged class, however, took possession of the region around St. Louis, and made partial settlements lower down on the west bank of the Mississippi. St. Louis and its environs matured as a State in 1819, and demanded admission with Slavery into the Union. Thus, only thirty-two years after the passage of the ordinance of 1787, and after its unanimous ratification by the American people, the privileged class made common cause with the new slaveholding State, and assuming a tone at once bold, insolent and menacing, they denied the power of Congress, although in the Territories it was supreme and exclusive, and equally supreme and exclusive, to give in the admission of new States, to legislate at all against their privileges in the Territories, or to refuse admission to a new State, on the ground of its refusal to surrender or abate those privileges; and they threatened in one loud voice to subjugate the Union, if Missouri should be rejected. The privileged class were backed then by the Senate of the United States, as they have been backed on all similar occasions since that time. They were met, however, with firmness and decision by the unprivileged class in the House of Representatives, and so Missouri failed then to be admitted as a Slave State. The privileged class resorted to a new form of strategy, the compromise of compromise. They offered to be satisfied if Missouri only should be admitted as a Slave State, while Congress should prohibit Slavery forever in all the residue of that part of the Louisiana purchase which lay north of the parallel of 36° 30' of north latitude. The territory between the parallel and the province of Texas, and constituting what is now the State of Arkansas, being left by implication to Slavery. This compromise was accepted, and this diplomacy obtained for the privileged class immediate advantages which had been denied to their clamor, and passion. This compromise, however, could have only the authority of a repealable act of Congress, so far as the prohibition of Slavery north of 36° 30' was concerned. Wise and great men contrived extraordinary forms to bind the faith of the privileged class to that perpetual inhibition. They gave to the compromise the nature form of a contract with mutual equivalents between the privileged class and the unprivileged class, which, if would so dishonorable and perfidious on the part of the privileged class, at any time, on any grounds or under any circumstances to annul or revoke, or to draw in question. They proclaimed it to be a contract proper to be submitted to the people, themselves for their ratification in the popular election. It was so submitted to the people, and so ratified by them. By virtue of this compromise Missouri came immediately into the Union as a Slave State, and Arkansas followed soon afterward as a Slave State, while, with the exception of Missouri, the compromise of 1787, by virtue of the same compromise, was extended across the Mississippi, along the parallel of 36° 30' to the Rocky mountains. Thus, and with such solemnities, was the strife of the privileged class of slaveholders for aggrandizement of territory finally composed forever settled.
It is not my purpose to discuss the policy or the justice of that great sentiment. As in the case of the constitution, the responsibility for that great measure rests with a generation that has passed away. We have to deal with it only as a fact, and with the state of affairs that was established by it.
The occupation of the new region west of the Mississippi, which had thus been saved for Freedom, was artfully postponed indefinitely by dedicating it as a home for the consecrated but perishing Indian tribes. It sounds in favor of the humanity of the unprivileged class, but of their prudence that they neither remonstrated nor complained of that dedication.
The success of the privileged class, in securing to themselves immediate possession of Missouri and Arkansas in exchange for the reversionary interest of the unprivileged class in the remainder of the Louisiana purchase, stimulated the unprivileged class in the House of Representatives to refuse to admit Missouri as a Slave State, while the privileged class resorted to a new form of strategy, the compromise of compromise.
