PITTSBURGH GAZETTE

A LUNATIC DOCTOR SETTING A BROKEN ARM.—Recently, while one of the patients of the State Lunatic Asylum, who was formerly a doctor, was taking his accustomed stroll for air and exercise, he was attracted to a house not far from the Asylum by the cries of a young girl, who, in climbing over a fence, had fallen and broken her arm. On entering the door he ascertained that the poor, decrepid, bed-ridden mother and the unfortunate girl, whose labor was the only support of the two, were the only occupants.—A boy had been sent for and was then absent in quest of a physician or surgeon. The doctor could not witness the young girl's distress, so he instantly went to work and set and splintered the broken limb. The old lady, with tears of joy and gratitude, exclaimed, "Doctor, what's to pay?" "Oh! nothing," he replied, "I am amply repaid in the satisfaction this opportunity has afforded me to relieve your daughter's distress." "Thank you, dear doctor, and God bless you! But when the doctor we have sent for arrives, who shall we say set the arm—what name and residence, doctor?" "Tell him," said our doctor, "that a patient from the New York State Lunatic Asylum, did it."—Utica Telegraph.

DR. ASH, in his New and complete Dictionary of the English Language, borrowed largely from Dr. Johnson. The latter had given as the origin of the word "Curmudgeon," the French cœur méchant. This, however, was not Johnson's own etymology, and accordingly he added to cœur méchant the words "an unknown correspondent" as the suggester of that derivation. Ash, with a laudable desire to be precise, and to assign to each word its due honor, inserted in his dictionary, as the etymology of the English "Curmudgeon," the French "cœur," unknown and "mechant," a correspondent, a miser, a churl, a gripe.

In the history of the Book of Common Prayer by the Rev. Mr. Procter, it is stated that the occasional prayers and thanksgiving contained in it are the compositions of the early reformers and their followers. The prayer for Parliament was composed by Archbishop Leand; that for "all conditions of men" by Bishop Guaniig, and the "general thanksgiving" by Reynolds, Bishop of Norwich.

THE London Punch says: "In the Panopticon there is written up over several apiaries, 'Never kill a bee.' A facetious country cousin says, since the advice is intended for Cockneys, it would be much better to tell them 'Never murder a H.'" Punch would better benefit from his own advice. It is very clear that the writer of the above pronounces the letter H. Aaitch, others he would have suggested that his proposed substitution should run: "Never murder an H."
