PITTSBURGH:

THURSDAY MORNING, NOV. 8, 1855.

Advance Payments.—Hereafter no subscription will be taken for the Daily or Weekly Gazette, unless payment is made in advance. Wherever the time to up to which the subscription is paid, the paper will be invariably stopped, unless the subscription is renewed by advance payment. All transient advertising, of every description, will be required to be paid in advance. The only exceptions will be where special month y or yearly contracts are made. sept1-tf-w.

☞To Advertisers.—Neither the Editorial Room or Printing Establishment of the Daily Gazette, are opened on Sunday. Advertisers who desire their notices to appear in the paper on Monday morning, will please hand them in before 5 o'clock, on Saturday.

☞Pittsburgh Weekly Gazette.—The extensive circulation of our Weekly Gazette offers to our business men the most desirable medium of making their business known. Our circulation is between four and five thousand, reaching almost every merchant, mechanic, farmer and shop-keeper in Western Pennsylvania, and Eastern Ohio.

THE LECTURE OF WENDELL PHILLIPS.—When Mr. Phillips was invited to lecture here he selected a lame literary subject, which afforded no scope to his powers as a lecturer; it was therefore thought best to allow him a full range in the choice of a theme, and he accordingly selected "The Philosophy of the Reform of Slavery."

So far as the title of this lecture indicated his purpose, it was not inferred that he would introduce into it any of the peculiar sentiments of his school; but he nevertheless did so, although restraining his language within bounds much more moderate than when on the platform at home.

We were pleased to hear Mr. Phillips, because he is a man of genius, earnest and honest in his views, and endowed with the rare faculty of presenting unpalatable truths in palatable words; but we are free to say that there were portions of his lecture which met our thorough disapproval, and it occasionally betrayed a spirit tainted with that venom which the endurance of long persecution is apt to engender.—He uttered many grave truths and presented many invincible arguments; but there was mingling with them so patent a disposition to judge harshly, and to generalise unfairly upon individual instances, that what was good and true was measurably nullified.

Slavery, according to Mr. Phillips, is not only an enormous evil but a gigantic sin, wielding in the hands of its votaries an immense moneied capital and political influence. How to get rid of it is the puzzle. England abolished Slavery in all her domisions; and so, latterly, did France; but this was accomplished through the aid of Episcopacy in the former and Catholicism in the latter, coupled with the power of the government, and these were "institutions" deprecated with the growth of centuries, enjoying a power almost independent of the people, and beyond say danger from popular caprice. In this country we have no such "institutions." The government is upon the side of the oppressor and so, in his view, is the Constitution; and co-operating with them is the great power of public opinion. The remaining forces, which we sometimes call our "institutions," are the wealth, or moneied power of the country; the press, including newspapers and general literature; political parties; and the pulpit. None of these, he contended, has the power to exterminate Slavery. Wealth will not war with wealth; the press derives its sustenance from the people and can never be in advance of public sentiment; political parties look to present results and justify the means by the end; and the pulpit, under our voluntary system, deriving its whole support from those to whom its ministers, cannot be expected to run a tilt against them. Hence, he argued, as all these "institutions" are but so many embodiments of the popular will, they can never rise above the current public sentiment.—The only means left to reformers is to operate directly upon popular opinion, and make that the great instrument of deliverance to the captive.

Such is Mr. Phillips' view. His great mistake, to our mind, consists in basing the wide sweep of his condemnation upon isolated cases, and denouncing the very instrumentalities which must ultimately accomplish the great end aimed at. He condemns the press in mass because there are leading publishers and editors who yield to the influence of Slavery; politicians he would thrust aside because those now and hitherto most prominent are and have been pro-Slavery; and the pulpit he adjudges guilty because it is occupied here and there by divines who venture to defend the rightfulness of oppression. He forgets, or shuts his eye to the fact, that there are, even now, leading book publishers in most of the cities who are striving to build up an anti-Slavery literature; that the country is dotted over with newspaper presses bold in defence of freedom; that the North is raising up political statesmen who have a voice for the oppressed and a hand for the down-trodden; and that the pulpit is constantly ringing with condemnations of Slavery uttered with a stout heart and determined mien. Thus, the agency of all these elements is not as active, or thorough, or general as it should be; but let us not fail to acknowledge it in its full extent.

In the grand circle of causation, results become causes, and these produce other results that become causes in their turn, and so on without end. Public opinion operates in the first instance upon the press, the politician and the pulpit; and these soon become potent in making new public opinion, which reacts in its turn upon the same elements and leads to still further production of popular sentiment. At this present time we know of no instrumentalities that are making public opinion so fast as the press, the politician and the pulpit, and hope that feel the force of the popular voice more than they do. In this mutual operation upon each other they are accomplishing a great work; and it is better, far better, to leave them to this natural order of things than to arraign them and reject them as false to their mission.

To Christianity and the Church, however bitterly the actions of the latter may be judged, we cling as the great hope of this nation in all its trials and troubles. The Church may be laggard in its movements, and betimes confound its circle of duty from a sense of danger; but it is to the religious spirit which is in man, and to the universal love, charity and kindness which Christianity inculcates that all true reformers must appeal if they expect to succeed, and it is to the Church, fully awakened and appreciating its mission, that they must look as their most powerful instrumentality. Our faith may be ridiculed as credulity; but all our hope in the successful abolition of Slavery in this country is centred in the proper application of the great principles of Christianity through their own legitimate means of operation.

THE ELECTIONS.—The news from Massachusetts is conclusive as to Gardiner's re-election. He has only about half the vote he got last year, but as a plurality elects, under the new law, he has slipped in between three competitors.

The dispatches from New York predict a Know Nothing success. They did the same last year, and for several days kept up the same story. But the vote of the cities is no indication of that in the country, and it will be safest to wait for word from the rural districts before yielding implicit belief to the telegraph.

PARODI.—This distinguished cantatrice gives her first Concert in this city to-morrow night, at City Hall. The programme contains selections from Lucie de Lammermoor, Der Freischutz, Le Prophete, Don Giovanni, Barber of Seville, Il Puritani and Norma, and she will be assisted by Maurice Strakosch, Signor Leonardi and Madame Strakosch. It is some time, now, since our citizens have had the opportunity of hearing artistes of such high merit; and as there is a very general desire to hear Parodi, we hazard little in predicting a full house.

FROM KANSAS.—We have from one of our corps of Correspondents in Kansas, an account of the organization of the Territorial Convention called by the Free State Party for the purpose of forming a State Constitution and applying for admission as a State into the Union. The attendance on the first day was small, only twenty-six delegates being present, and Col. LANE, of Indiana, was elected President.—Col. Lane does not enjoy the confidence of the settlers of Kansas, although he professes to agree with them in the wish to exclude Slavery from the territory. He is regarded as an intriguing and selfish politician, and recent disclosures, moreover, place his moral character in a very disadvantageous light.

PLANTING TREES.—We are reminded, by observing packages of trees in the floors of our agricultural warehouses, that the season for transplanting trees has come, and surely a more favorable season for the purpose never blessed the hopes of the husbandman or horticulturist.—We always look upon these packages with an eye of interest and affection. We cannot help glancing at the roots to see if they are properly protected from the effects of the sun and atmosphere, and from feeling anxious that they may soon find a safe home in a congenial soil. We love trees, of all descriptions, whether designed for fruit or shade, for flowers or foliage. We look upon a man who plants a tree well as a public benefactor, whose works shall follow him and bless those who shall come after him, when he himself shall be transplanted to a higher and more congenial sphere.

Thus loving these beautiful productions of nature, which so adorn and bless our earth and convert it into a paradise of rational enjoyment, suffer us, dear reader, to drop a few hints on the manner of planting. Our encomiums are bestowed on the man who plants a tree well.—The careless and slovenly planter does more harm than good. He destroys or renders sickly the beautiful object of his attention, and he discourages others, who may be deterred from the good work by his ill success. A sickly, stunted tree is always a painful object, and is a perpetual reproach upon the cruel planter whose reckless carelessness or ignorance consigned it to a life of disease and uselessness.

To plant a tree well it must have congenial soil. This is the product of skill and labor. It is seldom or never found in a natural state. If the soil is a rich, deep loam, resting on a porous sub-soil, it is only necessary to break it up deep over its entire extent, by sub-soil ploughing and harrowing; but if the soil is poor and thin, or wet, or has a heavy retentive sub-soil, it must be improved by bringing on soil or manure, and by draining. In all cases, to ensure success and satisfaction, a deep, reasonably rich, and well drained soil must be obtained. Trees will flourish in no other.

Pittsburgh is seeking her homes in the country. This is right. Hundreds of amateurs are planting trees. This is commendible; but we fear disappointment will follow many well meant efforts, and that both labor and trees will be lost, and what is still worse precious time will be wasted, and bitter disappointment will be the result where enjoyment was expected.

Better plant only one tree in a day well, than one hundred in an unscientific manner. Such is the haste of most persons to stock their grounds that they will not wait to prepare the soil. A small hole is dug, and the roots of the tree thrust in, without regard to its nature and wants, and a bitter crop of disappointment is the only fruit which is plucked. The better plan is to wait until the entire surface of the soil is prepared, so that a tree can be put down any where with a certainty of success. If this requires more time than the planter is willing to allow, the next best plan is to prepare large holes, five or six feet in diameter, and at least two feet deep, and fill up with good top-soil, composed principally of sandy loam, and plant the tree in the centre of it. Then proceed as rapidly as possible to improve the remainder of the soil, so that by the time the roots reach the margin of the holes, which they will do in the first or second season, they will there find a congenial and nutritive soil.

If this plan is taken, a forest of beautiful, healthful, and fruitful trees will spring up around the homestead, to the unalloyed delight of its owner, and the admiration of all who witness its success. The opposite policy, and the one usually followed, will delay his pleasures for years, and cause him to sigh over the ill success of his labors.

In procuring trees, always purchase of reliable nursery man; and be careful that the trees are not diseased, or injured in their arrival. Better pay a fair price for a good tree than to receive poor ones as a gift. Never pose the roots unnecessarily to the sun and air. A tree is set back frequently in this way a whole season, or permanently injured.

This is a good season of the year for setting deciduous trees, as dry and well prepared soils. Evergreens succeed better in the spirt after they have commenced to grow, during the month of May. Care should be taken, in transplanting Evergreens, not to allow the fine fibrous roots to be exposed to the atmosphere sufficiently to become dry. If so the tree is ruined.

Let every man who has a piece of ground however small plant trees, and plant them well. It is most delightful to watch the growth of tree or shrub one's own hands have planted—to see it expand and grow, yielding its useful shade, its beautiful foliage, or flowers and its luscious fruits. Other pleasures may more exciting, but we know of none more pusand rational.

A man who plants a tree well, we rest, is a public benefactor. He blesses posterity, he adorns the landscape, he beautifies the dwelling place of man. As long as that tree sees in the breeze he has not lived in vain. It is cheap and honorable, though humble road fame.—It is a better monument than marble. Let such monuments be multiplied.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

No Family Should be without Them.—We speak of M'LANE'S Liver Pills, which is become an indispensable Family Medicine. The fateful symptoms which arise from a diseased Liver in but three, halves, more or less, in every family; dyspepsia, sick headache, obstruction of the menses, sour stomach, pains in the side, with dry, hacking cough, are the results of hepatic derangement—and for these Dr. LEROY'S Pills are a sovereign remedy. They have never been known to fail, and they should be kept at all times handiest.

DIRECTIONS.—Take two or three going to bed every one or third night. If they do not operate three or four times by next morning, take one or two more. A slight breakfast should invariably follow them.

The Liver Pill may also be used wherever the bilious is necessary. As an anti-bilious purgative they are unequalled or no none. And in doses of two or one, they give astonishing relief to sick headache, also slight derangement of the stomach.

☞Purchasers will be careful to ask DR. M'LANE'S CELEBRATED LIVER PILLS, and take no else. There are other Pills, purporting to be LIVER Pills, now before the public. DR. M'LANE'S LIVER PILLS, the celebrated Vermifuge, can now be had of all respectable Drug Stores in the United States, and Canada.

GENTLEMEN—Having sold your valuable Vermifuge for some time, and having seen it used for many years, we would recommend it to all as a safe and efficient remedy for all cases of worms. In no instance have we ever seen any evil results following its administration, but always best it commended the purposes for which it was intended, and been perfectly satisfactory.

Believing that everything that has been said in this regard in its virtues is strictly in accordance with our observations not only as practitioners, but as men of business, we would unhesitatingly say to all who read this, that it is the best Vermifuge now in use, and that its virtues are best known when tried.

Important to Farmers—New Discovery—TROTTAIN'S CATTLE POWDER.—These Powders are put up in one pound packages, and are chiefly a food to cattle, not only for the diseases incident to horses, cows, oxen, and other animals, but they are likewise an excellent article to improve the condition of the animal.

For Milch Cows, they not only improve the condition of milch cows, but they increase the quantity as well as improve the quality of milk and butter. The proprietors say that it increases the quantity of butter from half a pound to a pound a week to each cow; while those persons who have tried it say a pound and a half to two pounds per week, with the usual kind of feeding as before. Of the thing we are certain, and who can deny it, that all the time, and save money by the operation as well as improve the appearance of their stock. Price 25 cts. a paper; 5 papers for $1.

"A thing of beauty
Is a joy forever."

So sang the gifted poet Keats. What can be more beautiful than a fine lot of Hair, that noblest of nature's adornments. Who at is young, but values the luxuriant locks of youth, & would preserve them and who that is old but would wish to restore, if all such we would commend LYON KATHAIRON, universally acknowledged to be the most valuable and the most scientifically performed toilet article ever prepared. Be sure and ask for LYON'S KATHAIRON, to guard against the valueless imitations and counterfeits, which have lately been put up under somewhat similar names. Sold everywhere for only 25 cents per bottle.
