for the person suing." The chief difference be-tween the two statutes is in the remedy-for the recovery of the penalty. The first is by sum-mary conviction, in which the defendant is de-prived of the right of appeal and the trial by jury. The last is by action of debt, in which he is entitled to both. It is therefore a very ma-terial and substantial objection to the proceed-lars halow, that they are instituted in a form mary conviction, in which the defendant is deprived of the right of appeal and the trial by jury. The last is by action of debt, in which he is entitled to both. It is therefore a very material and substantial objection to the proceedings below, that they are instituted in a form which deprives the defendant of his dearest rights, and under a statute which has been repealed. The Act of 1835, is addition to the penealty of fifty dollags, to be collected by action of debt, authorizes the offence to be punished by indictment, fine and imprisonment. This is exposing the offender to a double punishment for the same act, would be a measure of severity, in the construction of penal statutes, which would shoot the most ordinary sense of justice.
