The Hand Sewing Machine, PATENTED EDWARD SERRS, PATENT OF F. L. ROBINSON & S. H. ROPER, BY EDWARD & DAVIS, BOSTON.

THIS Machine actually sews; uses but a single thread; requires no shuttle, makes a stitch alike on both sides, and takes every variety of known stitch, makes long or short. The stitches are formed the same as in hand Sewing, and, except in the perfection of their accuracy and regularity, cannot be distinguished from hand work. The work is performed with as great or less rapidity, while being of vastly superior quality to the best Hand Sewing.

BY WILLSON, Agent for Pittsburgh, No. 345 Broadway, New York. (Circulars and Samples sent by mail on application.) Solicitors wanted. se29-1yd

Handsome Income to be Made at Home. THE above can be made in every Town and County throughout the Union, by engaging in the most honorable and easy business which can be offered to the public. For an outlay of $10, one thousand dollars a year may be made. The Stock in no little embarrassment. In all the cases involving the principle of extradition of fugitives, the intervention of the Governor is required by law, in other cases, where there is no positive law, still necessity, and immemorial usage, are quite as imperious that he should be the channel of intercourse."

"While the committee fully sanction the conduct of the Governor in the special instance referred to, still the importance of the general principle involved, constrains them to announce the conclusion that the Legislature itself should determine upon the cases which should destroy, in any manner affect, the intercommunication between the State and its confederates."

NEW ENGLAND HUMOR.—As a specimen of many examples brought forward in a recent lecture upon the characteristics of New England humor the Boston Post quotes the following:

"The lecturer was enforcing the idea that the sense of contrast and opposition of idea was often reached through the effect of total and embarrassing disappointment in the expected point of a story. Of this kind, he said, was a question which was once elicited from a grave man of New England old man in the town of Andover, by an animated account of a fire in the neighborhood. As the usual occupants of the bar-room were sitting about the fire in the evening, each with his cigar and glass of suspicious looking liquor in his hand, there entered a farmer from the 'North Parish,' with the air of a man who had something on his mind to communicate. 'I've'd ought to s'ben over to the 'North Parish' this morning,' said he; 'they was a little the wust fire, I guess, that they've had for twenty year in Essex county. Pettingell's new barn's burnt down flatter'n Jerewsalem. Pettingell, he was off down to Newburyport with a lode o'hay, and they came a white ox'l and lit there on the end o'the barn. Well, that air wild Irish Paddy he's hed over there—I don't see no use o'having no sech good for-nothin' shoat recound—he went and got out Pettingell's ole king's arm to shoot him, jest to please the children, jest foolishness. Well, they expect some o' the waddin' went up into the barn winder, an' it like hay; sany 'bout half-n hour the barn bust out all in a lite blaze, burnt up more'n twenty ton o' English hay, and much as sixteen or seventeen cows, and three o' Pettingell's horses—they didn't git out but jest one old critter, and he aint good for nothin'—burnt the rest on 'em all up closs to Pettingell, he got home rite in the middle on't; they aint no insurance, and he's most crazy 'bout it; he's ben a takin' on wuss than ever I see; I've ben up there a tryin' to cheer him up, but he feels dreffle bad, I tell you.' When this circumstantial narrative was concluded there was a general silence—the result, probably, of sympathy for Mr. Pettingell, not of speculation, perhaps, upon the singularity of the accident which had led to his loss. After the lapse of several minutes, however, the pause was broken by a dull, frosty-faced old fellow, who had been staring intently at the coals ever since the speaker had finished. Looking up with an, as yet, unsatisfied expression of face, he inquired, 'Well, did they kill the owl?'"

NATIONAL PARTIES.—The Cincinnati Commercial of Wednesday says:

We have, on former occasions, expressed the idea, that a Union can be conceded by all Democrats, that the North can not constitute a national party without the assistance of the South, the South is fully competent to give nationality to an organization irrespective of any cooperation from the North. The Washington Union assumes the correctness of this idea in the following remark touching the candidates for the Speakership in Congress:

"The only national man running against the Democratic candidate in the House, are Southern Know Nothings, who are abjured by their Northern allies."

We do, have been amused at this peculiarity in the politics of the country. We have seen the South banded together, like a company of brothers, against the North, but no body ever thought there was any thing sectional about it. When the Southern Whigs in the winter of 1853-4, met together in caucus, and agreed to desert their brethren of the free States, and vote for the violation of the solemn compact of 1820, this was all right. Nobody raised a howl of sectionalism, because this came from the South. The North very properly regarded the repeal of the Missouri Compromise as a gross wrong and outrage and feel that they have a right to insist upon its restoration. If the North conclude to vote for some man for President, who agrees with them on this subject, all at once this becomes most obnoxious, outrageous sectionalism, and the Washington Union, and all the sectional, pro-Slavery papers are ferocious about it. The Union is on the very brink of dissolution, and all because the North has become so sectional. But the members of Congress from the South can declare that they will vote for no man who asks for the restoration of the Missouri Compromise, and take the most ultra sectional position, and all the time they are national men" friends of the Union, and bitterly opposed to this thing called sectionalism. If it were not serious, it would be intensely funny. —Ohio State Journal.

PIONEERS FOR KANSAS.—We are glad to hear that prompt and efficient steps are to be taken to organise a company of two hundred men for the purpose of emigrating to Kansas the moment their services shall be required to aid the people at that territory to defend their homes and firesides, and to protect their civil and political rights against the inroads of the ruthless gang of Stringfellow assassins, whose outrages they have so long endured. They will each be provided with a copy of Sharp's rifle—a document for which the cowardly ruffians stand in mortal fear,—and fixings to match. The gentlemen who have made the offer of $3,000 to defray their expenses were in earnest, and we have no doubt enough of our citizens will respond to the call to fill up the company without delay. There is a love of justice and a hatred of oppression, and violence, and wrong among our people which will prompt hundreds to volunteer their services in so righteous a cause.—Detroit Tri.

SUPERINTENDENT OF STATE ARMS.—The Harrisburg Herald mentions the arrest of two persons, one said to be a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature, on the charge of being concerned in shipping $1,800 worth of the State's muskets in New York, from whence it is supposed they were to be sent to Col. Kinney. The muskets have
