

Experiment in fattening cattle - John Shaw, President of the Medical County Agricultural Society, has a good deal of experience in fattening cattle. He writes us from Litchfield, December 28th, as follows: "I found, in attending our State Agricultural Convention at Columbus, this week, there was a general inquiry among farmers and feeders of cattle, to learn the best and cheapest mode of fattening. I propose to give, through the Ohio Farmer, my experience in fattening for two years. In 1853, I had fed sixty head of two and three year old Durham steers. The average weight was 1050 lbs. I fed them hay and corn in the ear without feeding. I commenced feeding in the first of December, when the average weight was 1050 lbs. I fed them one amount of feed to each steer daily. The average weight of corn, and fifteen pounds of hay. The corn was fed in the morning, and the hay at night. They were turned to grass on the 15th of April, and were sold the 15th of June, when the average weight was 1200 lbs. In 1854, I had fed the same number of steers, and of the same grade. The average weight at the first of December, was 1050 lbs. I began feeding them in the stable the 20th of November. The manner of fattening was with a rape, (the same as the first year), and so on, until the stable was full. I fed 20 quarts of corn to each steer in the morning, and the rape turned out to water which was in the yard, for an hour. After trying them up again, I fed 10 lbs. of hay to each steer in the morning, and again at night. They were turned out to grass on the 15th of April, and on the 15th of June, when the average weight was 1400 lbs. My opinion is that cattle fattened in this manner, will do better in the winter, will take on flesh more readily when turned to grass, than those that have been fed out of doors."
