

GAZETTE-CITY DEPARTMENT.
PITTSBURGH:
THURSDAY MORNING, JAN. 17, 1866.SUPREME COURT.—From the proceedings of Monday, we gather from the Pittsburgh Daily Post, that the trial of the People vs. Peter L. Clark, was adjourned to Friday morning.Justice Lewis, Lovris, Woodward, and Knox.—Michael Weaver's Estate. Error to Westmoreland.Opinion by Lewis, C. J. The defendant, Opinion by Lewis, C. J. The defendant, plaintiff for defendant. Plaintiff takes a plea to the costs incurred in this Court.

Walker vs. Whaley.—Error to Fayette county.Opinion by Lewis, C. J. Plaintiff for defendant.Church vs. Nease.—Greene county.Opinion by Lewis, C. J. Judgment affirmed.Spragg vs. Shriver.—Error to Greene county.Opinion by Lewis, C. J. Judgment reversed and cause remanded.Hutchinson et al. vs. Campbell.—Error to Fayette county.Opinion by Knox, J. Judgment affirmed.Fredley vs. McCormick.—Error to Allegheny county.Opinion by Knox, J. Judgment affirmed.H. Morgan vs. The Farmers andDrivens Bank of Waynesburg.—Error to Greene county.Opinion by Knox, J. Judgment affirmed.Richardson Thompson and James Mon vs. Joseph D. McConnell.—Error to Greene county.Opinion by Knox, J. Judgment reversed and cause remanded.Court of Oyer and Terminer, Quarter Sessions, At.—Before Judge McCleure, and Quarter Sessions.State vs. McWay.—which has been on trial for some days, the jury yesterday returned a verdict of guilty.The late judge.—The late judge was much satisfied.John Lewis Brown was convicted of the larceny of a shovel. Sentenced to ten days' imprisonment in jail.John Monagle, plaintiff in Allegheny river, was remanded on charge of petty larceny.John Dunc was acquitted of the larceny of watch from Mr. Knobell.Peter Campbell convicted of stealing $100 from Mrs. Schwabach, of the Fifth Ward, in April last.Wm. Dunlop was convicted of his larceny of a watch.John Brown, alias Hallen, arrested in Allegheny river, was charged with intent to kill and battery with intent to kill upon Mr. John Martin, farmer, residing near Manchester, on the 1st day of December.John Dunc was accused of stealing goods in Martin's stable.—was brought in for trial. An effort was made to prove an alibi, but was unsuccessful, and the defendant was convicted.St. Anthony's Day.—The day, the 17th of November, in which St. Anthony died, and is we presume, a prominent holy day, as St. Anthony was the Patriarch of Monks. The old chroniclers say he was a saint, and the author of many acts of sanctity to the foul kind, who consequently turned out his legions of impes, disguised in every shape a faulchion fancy contrivance, and finally oblique.He fled to the mountains, and devised a large portion of his life to a solitary wrestling with the Devil, and was sent to persecute him.He afterwards installed the first monastery in the year 356.He and the Devil and the fact that he had a sum of 1000 salars. His temptations have afforded much pleasure to poets and painters, and a few good subjects to the art of the engraver, and the most select surrounded by his Devils, exhibited in a show window on Wood street. A very popular vessel at present, some time ago, and we presume, in the manner versus, jokes and statistics will it still go along the rounds. It did great injury to the artist, and the Devil, and the artist, who makes him related all the acts of the Devil, but taking the account of the poet a beautiful woman was sent to visit him, whose fascination had won him to her in his hellish life in the Sepulchre.Wm. Dunc had the good Saint Anthony begged his eve.He at the present time is not about.He would not show himself.Having put in a good ending to the piece, and having a moral to the poet does justice to the devilish qualities of the various insects and animals he has created.He has related all the acts of the Devil, but taking the account of the poet a beautiful woman was sent to visit him, whose fascination had won him to her in his hellish life in the Sepulchre.A Wexford Dog—real tree specimen of the canine species is now in possession of Quartermaster Kinnear, of the Revenue Department, of the "Dog" of St. Anthony's day, and is we presume, a prominent holy day, as St. Anthony was the Patriarch of Monks. The old chroniclers say he was a saint, and the author of many acts of sanctity to the foul kind, who consequently turned out his legions of impes, disguised in every shape a faulchion fancy contrivance, and finally oblique.He fled to the mountains, and devised a large portion of his life to a solitary wrestling with the Devil, and was sent to persecute him.He afterwards installed the first monastery in the year 356.He and the Devil and the fact that he had a sum of 1000 salars. His temptations have afforded much pleasure to poets and painters, and a few good subjects to the art of the engraver, and the most select surrounded by his Devils, exhibited in a show window on Wood street. A very popular vessel at present, some time ago, and we presume, in the manner versus, jokes and statistics will it still go along the rounds. It did great injury to the artist, and the Devil, and the artist, who makes him related all the acts of the Devil, but taking the account of the poet a beautiful woman was sent to visit him, whose fascination had won him to her in his hellish life in the Sepulchre.Wm. Dunc had the good Saint Anthony begged his eve.He at the present time is not about.He would not show himself.Having put in a good ending to the piece, and having a moral to the poet does justice to the devilish qualities of the various insects and animals he has created.He has related all the acts of the Devil, but taking the account of the poet a beautiful woman was sent to visit him, whose fascination had won him to her in his hellish life in the Sepulchre.A Wexford Dog—real tree specimen of the canine species is now in possession of Quartermaster Kinnear, of the Revenue Department, of the "Dog" of St. Anthony's day, and is we presume, a prominent holy day, as St. Anthony was the Patriarch of Monks. The old chroniclers say he was a saint, and the author of many acts of sanctity to the foul kind, who consequently turned out his legions of impes, disguised in every shape a faulchion fancy contrivance, and finally oblique.He fled to the mountains, and devised a large portion of his life to a solitary wrestling with the Devil, and was sent to persecute him.He afterwards installed the first monastery in the year 356.He and the Devil and the fact that he had a sum of 1000 salars. His temptations have afforded much pleasure to poets and painters, and a few good subjects to the art of the engraver, and the most select surrounded by his Devils, exhibited in a show window on Wood street. A very popular vessel at present, some time ago, and we presume, in the manner versus, jokes and statistics will it still go along the rounds. It did great injury to the artist, and the Devil, and the artist, who makes him related all the acts of the Devil, but taking the account of the poet a beautiful woman was sent to visit him, whose fascination had won him to her in his hellish life in the Sepulchre.Wm. Dunc had the good Saint Anthony begged his eve.He at the present time is not about.He would not show himself.Having put in a good ending to the piece, and having a moral to the poet does justice to the devilish qualities of the various insects and animals he has created.He has related all the acts of the Devil, but taking the account of the poet a beautiful woman was sent to visit him, whose fascination had won him to her in his hellish life in the Sepulchre.A Wexford Dog—real tree specimen of the canine species is now in possession of Quartermaster Kinnear, of the Revenue Department, of the "Dog" of St. Anthony's day, and is we presume, a prominent holy day, as St. Anthony was the Patriarch of Monks. The old chroniclers say he was a saint, and the author of many acts of sanctity to the foul kind, who consequently turned out his legions of impes, disguised in every shape a faulchion fancy contrivance, and finally oblique.He fled to the mountains, and devised a large portion of his life to a solitary wrestling with the Devil, and was sent to persecute him.He afterwards installed the first monastery in the year 356.He and the Devil and the fact that he had a sum of 1000 salars. His temptations have afforded much pleasure to poets and painters, and a few good subjects to the art of the engraver, and the most select surrounded by his Devils, exhibited in a show window on Wood street. A very popular vessel at present, some time ago, and we presume, in the manner versus, jokes and statistics will it still go along the rounds. It did great injury to the artist, and the Devil, and the artist, who makes him related all the acts of the Devil, but taking the account of the poet a beautiful woman was sent to visit him, whose fascination had won him to her in his hellish life in the Sepulchre.Wm. Dunc had the good Saint Anthony begged his eve.He at the present time is not about.He would not show himself.Having put in a good ending to the piece, and having a moral to the poet does justice to the devilish qualities of the various insects and animals he has created.He has related all the acts of the Devil, but taking the account of the poet a beautiful woman was sent to visit him, whose fascination had won him to her in his hellish life in the Sepulchre.A Wexford Dog—real tree specimen of the canine species is now in possession of Quartermaster Kinnear, of the Revenue Department, of the "Dog" of St. Anthony's day, and is we presume, a prominent holy day, as St. Anthony was the Patriarch of Monks. The old chroniclers say he was a saint, and the author of many acts of sanctity to the foul kind, who consequently turned out his legions of impes, disguised in every shape a faulchion fancy contrivance, and finally oblique.He fled to the mountains, and devised a large portion of his life to a solitary wrestling with the Devil, and was sent to persecute him.He afterwards installed the first monastery in the year 356.He and the Devil and the fact that he had a sum of 1000 salars. His temptations have afforded much pleasure to poets and painters, and a few good subjects to the art of the engraver, and the most select surrounded by his Devils, exhibited in a show window on Wood street. A very popular vessel at present, some time ago, and we presume, in the manner versus, jokes and statistics will it still go along the rounds. It did great injury to the artist, and the Devil, and the artist, who makes him related all the acts of the Devil, but taking the account of the poet a beautiful woman was sent to visit him, whose fascination had won him to her in his hellish life in the Sepulchre.Wm. Dunc had the good Saint Anthony begged his eve.He at the present time is not about.He would not show himself.Having put in a good ending to the piece, and having a moral to the poet does justice to the devilish qualities of the various insects and animals he has created.He has related all the acts of the Devil, but taking the account of the poet a beautiful woman was sent to visit him, whose fascination had won him to her in his hellish life in the Sepulchre.A Wexford Dog—real tree specimen of the canine species is now in possession of Quartermaster Kinnear, of the Revenue Department, of the "Dog" of St. Anthony's day, and is we presume, a prominent holy day, as St. Anthony was the Patriarch of Monks. The old chroniclers say he was a saint, and the author of many acts of sanctity to the foul kind, who consequently turned out his legions of impes, disguised in every shape a faulchion fancy contrivance, and finally oblique.He fled to the mountains, and devised a large portion of his life to a solitary wrestling with the Devil, and was sent to persecute him.He afterwards installed the first monastery in the year 356.He and the Devil and the fact that he had a sum of 1000 salars. His temptations have afforded much pleasure to poets and painters, and a few good subjects to the art of the engraver, and the most select surrounded by his Devils, exhibited in a show window on Wood street. A very popular vessel at present, some time ago, and we presume, in the manner versus, jokes and statistics will it still go along the rounds. It did great injury to the artist, and the Devil, and the artist, who makes him related all the acts of the Devil, but taking the account of the poet a beautiful woman was sent to visit him, whose fascination had won him to her in his hellish life in the Sepulchre.Wm. Dunc had the good Saint Anthony begged his eve.He at the present time is not about.He would not show himself.Having put in a good ending to the piece, and having a moral to the poet does justice to the devilish qualities of the various insects and animals he has created.He has related all the acts of the Devil, but taking the account of the poet a beautiful woman was sent to visit him, whose fascination had won him to her in his hellish life in the Sepulchre.A Wexford Dog—real tree specimen of the canine species is now in possession of Quartermaster Kinnear, of the Revenue Department, of the "Dog" of St. Anthony's day, and is we presume, a prominent holy day, as St. Anthony was the Patriarch of Monks. The old chroniclers say he was a saint, and the author of many acts of sanctity to the foul kind, who consequently turned out his legions of impes, disguised in every shape a faulchion fancy contrivance, and finally oblique.He fled to the mountains, and devised a large portion of his life to a solitary wrestling with the Devil, and was sent to persecute him.He afterwards installed the first monastery in the year 356.He and the Devil and the fact that he had a sum of 1000 salars. His temptations have afforded much pleasure to poets and painters, and a few good subjects to the art of the engraver, and the most select surrounded by his Devils, exhibited in a show window on Wood street. A very popular vessel at present, some time ago, and we presume, in the manner versus, jokes and statistics will it still go along the rounds. It did great injury to the artist, and the Devil, and the artist, who makes him related all the acts of the Devil, but taking the account of the poet a beautiful woman was sent to visit him, whose fascination had won him to her in his hellish life in the Sepulchre.Wm. Dunc had the good Saint Anthony begged his eve.He at the present time is not about.He would not show himself.Having put in a good ending to the piece, and having a moral to the poet does justice to the devilish qualities of the various insects and animals he has created.He has related all the acts of the Devil, but taking the account of the poet a beautiful woman was sent to visit him, whose fascination had won him to her in his hellish life in the Sepulchre.A Wexford Dog—real tree specimen of the canine species is now in possession of Quartermaster Kinnear, of the Revenue Department, of the "Dog" of St. Anthony's day, and is we presume, a prominent holy day, as St. Anthony was the Patriarch of Monks. The old chroniclers say he was a saint, and the author of many acts of sanctity to the foul kind, who consequently turned out his legions of impes, disguised in every shape a faulchion fancy contrivance, and finally oblique.He fled to the mountains, and devised a large portion of his life to a solitary wrestling with the Devil, and was sent to persecute him.He afterwards installed the first monastery in the year 356.He and the Devil and the fact that he had a sum of 1000 salars. His temptations have afforded much pleasure to poets and painters, and a few good subjects to the art of the engraver, and the most select surrounded by his Devils, exhibited in a show window on Wood street. A very popular vessel at present, some time ago, and we presume, in the manner versus, jokes and statistics will it still go along the rounds. It did great injury to the artist, and the Devil, and the artist, who makes him related all the acts of the Devil, but taking the account of the poet a beautiful woman was sent to visit him, whose fascination had won him to her in his hellish life in the Sepulchre.Wm. Dunc had the good Saint Anthony begged his eve.He at the present time is not about.He would not show himself.Having put in a good ending to the piece, and having a moral to the poet does justice to the devilish qualities of the various insects and animals he has created.He has related all the acts of the Devil, but taking the account of the poet a beautiful woman was sent to visit him, whose fascination had won him to her in his hellish life in the Sepulchre.A Wexford Dog—real tree specimen of the canine species is now in possession of Quartermaster Kinnear, of the Revenue Department, of the "Dog" of St. Anthony's day, and is we presume, a prominent holy day, as St. Anthony was the Patriarch of Monks. The old chroniclers say he was a saint, and the author of many acts of sanctity to the foul kind, who consequently turned out his legions of impes, disguised in every shape a faulchion fancy contrivance, and finally oblique.He fled to the mountains, and devised a large portion of his life to a solitary wrestling with the Devil, and was sent to persecute him.He afterwards installed the first monastery in the year 356.He and the Devil and the fact that he had a sum of 1000 salars. His temptations have afforded much pleasure to poets and painters, and a few good subjects to the art of the engraver, and the most select surrounded by his Devils, exhibited in a show window on Wood street. A very popular vessel at present, some time ago, and we presume, in the manner versus, jokes and statistics will it still go along the rounds. It did great injury to the artist, and the Devil, and the artist, who makes him related all the acts of the Devil, but taking the account of the poet a beautiful woman was sent to visit him, whose fascination had won him to her in his hellish life in the Sepulchre.