Fallure of the Baltimore American, writing from New York, eays:

"A report is current that one of the flour leagues formed in this city some months ago has turned out a flat failure, the flour ceating each subscriber $10,50 per barrel, and being of too inferior a quality for family use. This is helping the poor with a vengeance."

Yery much was promised from these leagues, when they were formed, and they were halled as the great means of deliverance from the man power of speculators. The result has been in Chicago—low, compared with those prevailing in New York—and adding the price of freight, convinced themselves that they could lay flour down in that city at prices far below those charged them by the regular dealers.—They never stopped to enquire what they could lay flour down in that city at prices far below those charged them by the regular dealers.—They never stopped to enquire what they could feelight, convinced themselves that they could that which was cheapert. In getting it home, they have not only found the material unfit for domestic use, being made from inferior spring wheat, but they have learned the fact that there were other expenses bealdes freight, and that therefore their borgals is no bargain at all. Plans that look well on peper do not always turn out as favorably as they seem.

"He moved for the appointment of a committee of one from each State, and that they should be elected by bailot; a means of designating a committee; he placed the names of several that had voted against the reception of Missouri into the Union; and had the influence to have them elected; eighteen the first ballot; and the remaining six were upon his suggestion, made to report favorably to the reception of the new buyse through the Business of the State into the Union. But this did not satisfy state into the Union. But this did not satisfy and had the happiness to wrings from them the positive promise he desired. This gave the question the scale in the House, and he knew the question was settled. It was Sunday evening, and he had sate a walk of three miles, to dine with the Russian minister, from whom he had six standing invitation to dine on every.
