THE ELECTION OF BANKS. -- We cannot remember an acnouncement that electrified the public so much or gave such general joy, as that of the election of Banks. "Hope deferred maketh the heart sick;" and the hope of this result had been defeated so often that it had given way to a feeling akin to despair; but just as every one was pregared to hear of the final defeat of the Republican phalanx, came the glad news of the enemy's overthrow. It was all the better for

The Bostonians gave vent to their rejoloing in the discharge of a hundred guns. It was an apsould have been a similar one here; but in the absence of opportunity for making so much noise over the happy event, the great public heart must be content with a quiet laugh of triumph. The congratulation which the people will send up to their representatives will be none the less hearty because it lacks estentation .-Every true lover of Freedom and Republican ism throughout the North is full of gratitude to the noble band of men who have stood togeth to the noble band of men who have stood together like a wail of adamant in a sirragic unprecented for its length and bitterness, and who

It is the first time that the North has made a decided stand for its rights, and its success must teach the clittens of the Free States, as well as the Bouth, how invincible a free people is when united. At last there is a North; and this fact, so cheering to the dwellers in these latitudes, must fall with as chilling an effect upon the people of the Slave States as the hyperborean (and, to them, unusual) weather under which they are now shivering. For the first time within their recollection, they are enduring the rigors of a Northern winter; and perhape no more appropriate occasion could be found to convince them of the fact that Northern firmness in politics is as much a reality as Northern weather.

Much praise is due to the members from Pennsylvania who, at an early day after the meeting of Congress, united themselves with the great mass of Northern members. Their adherence to Fulles, at the outset, grew out of their attachment to hm, personally, and their desire to see a member of their own delegation in the see a member of their own delegation in the states between the Commissioners and the true position of the function of the function upon his course in this matter. The House of Refuge for Western Pennsylvania is a very interesting document. The institution was formally opened on the 13th day of Dec. 1854, since which time 145 immates have been received, of whom 135 still remain—99 ingh only 60 were natives of this country. Of the whole number received, 28 were born in foreign lands; 85 were of American parentage; 51 Irish; 20 Germans; 5 English; 1 mitted was 17½ years; gurls 18½ years. is $40,000; from counties $22,500; from indiwidual subscriptions $17,628; leaving a balance unpravided for of $16,204 56. The Board exted to be relieved from this debt by subscriptions of counties. Having been disappointed, it looks with confidence to the Legislature for farther help, which we hope will not be denied. The buildings of the Institution were designed for the accommodation of 228 inmates, viz: 181 boys and 95 girls. Should the number of commitments for the coming, equal that of the past year, additional erections would soon be required. The boys' school room is already full and over flowing, and should be enlarged as soon as the mesas of the Institution will admit. In the planning of the buildings, ample provision was made for the enlargement, and a wing for boys' dormitories, which may be first wanted, could be added at comparatively small cost. It is not probable, however, that the increase hereafter will be any thing near the ratio of last year,

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 29th, 1856. of the Pittsburgh Gazette:

To the educate of the Pattiburgh Gasette:
Your paper of pesterday, contains the statements of Mr. Hopkins, late President of the board of Canal Commissioners, and myself, in relation to the withdrawal of the Transporters from the

to the withdrawal of the Transporters from the Main Line.

Both statements are substantially correct, and do not conflict with each other. The position assumed by me is that the nati recenue of the Commonwealth has been increased, by the with-drawal of the Transporters. This Mr. H. has beretofore admitted, and does not now deny. It would be true even if the charges on the Main Line had remained at the same rates of toll established at the opening of navigation in 1855, in as much as the receipts of the Commonwealth from the transportation of a ton of tine had remained at the same rates of toll established at the opening of navigation in 1856, in as much as the receipts of the Comnonwealth from the transportation of a ton of freight between Fitzburgh and Philadelphia by the Pennsylvania and Columbia Railroads was about the same, under these rates of toll, that it would have been if passed over the entire length of the Main Line, while the State sayed the coast of its transportation, no inconsiderable sum, over the Canal and Allegheny Portage Balimodore the Canal Report, that a reduced rate of toll was in contemplation, and that the transporters submitted a schedule which was regarded as inadmissible, but that the board was willing to make any reasonable reduction in tolls which in the demanded for the purpose of retaining them upon the Line. Now as the tolls established at the opening of navigation gave to the State about the same amount, whether the Railroad or State works, it follows of course that any reduction would have given to the Common and the state of things? Would it not be wiser to meet the difficult of the Common of the transporters on the Canal. Was application to the viser to meet the difficulty at concept and any ske what possible motive could there be for perpetuating this state of things? Would it not be wiser to meet the difficulty at concept and as we the unnecessary expenditures in progress or entemplation to preserve transportation provided the sum of the Transporters on the Canal. The progress they withheld what would otherwise have contributed withheld what would otherwise have contributed withheld what would otherwise have contributed to the settlement of a difficult problem, but that OHIO & PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD. they have also acted in direct opposition to its plainest teachings.

THE GREAT QUESTION.—No honest and candid The greater part, of the year, the boys were employed in improving the premises. The large amount of grading done by them has been a great saving to the resources of the institution. Twenty to thirty boys, during the past summer, were almost constantly at work beyond the walls. All the washing, troning, cooking and tailoring is done by the girls.

Slavery is the great question, and the next Presidential election must be fought or that issue alone.

The trial of Parsons at Hollidaysburg, on a charge of Kidnapping, ended on Thursday, last. Parsons was acquitted; and we are thus, for the present, compelled to do without the proof, that would otherwise have been forthcoming, the emptiness of Virginia bluster.
