IMMENSE FREMONT CONVENTION.

GREAT ENTHUSIASM.

Yesterday was a great day in Pittsburgh. It witnessed one of those remarkable displays which can only occur in a free country, where the people select their own rulers, and give expression to their will in the management of the Government.

Yesterday was the day appointed for the Mass Convention of the friends of Fremont in this and the adjoining counties, and it is but a faint expression of the reality to say that it was successful even beyond the most sanguine anticipations of the warmest friends of the cause of Freedom.

We expected a good Convention, a large outpouring of the people; but we had no conception of the reality which met our astonished gaze.

We shall not pretend to give a description of the vast crowd, of the wonderful enthusiasm, of the magnificent procession, of the numerous and most eloquent speeches. Our reporters will do their best to give our readers some faint conception of the wonderful scene; but after all they can say not one half will be told. It would take a volume to describe the wonderful procession alone, with all its numberless banners and mottoes, its quaint devices, its rich jokes, its amusing caricatures, and its keen sarcasms.

In one word, it was the greatest political Convention of the people, ever held in Western Pennsylvania, and probably in this State, whether considered in respect to its numbers, its enthusiasm, or its brilliant display.

The Harrison Convention of 1840, justly considered the greatest demonstration of its kind, was literally nothing in comparison with it.

Great numbers of people arrived on Tuesday, but on Wednesday morning every avenue leading to the city, from every point of the compass, was crowded with every description of conveyance. The Western trains brought in altogether forty-six loaded cars, and the other Railroads were equally crowded.

By ten o'clock the streets were densely packed with people, and presented a most brilliant scene. The windows of every house on the line of the procession were crowded with ladies, waving banners and handkerchiefs, and the streets presented a beautiful appearance from the decoration of flags and mottoes.

The procession was formed a little after ten o'clock, but the last of it did not arrive at the ground set apart for the Convention until after two o'clock, P. M. Take it altogether it was the most extraordinary procession we have ever seen. Nearly every profession, art, trade and employment was represented. The stalwart blacksmith was hammering out his iron, the carpenter was pushing his plane, the moulder was preparing his moulds, the engine builder was turning his lathe, and driving his rivets, and so on through all the trades; while the printers were busy scattering the fresh printed sheets in the crowd. The steamboat-men, the boat builders, the draymen, and the butchers made magnificent displays. Time fails us, however, to enumerate the wonders of the procession.

Of the numbers in procession, there are different opinions. It was nearly three hours in passing the corner of Smithfield and Fifth streets, where we stood the whole time. Its march was at about the rate of three miles an hour. This would make the procession from seven to nine miles long, and this we think is very near the reality. There were over seventeen hundred Horses, about four hundred wagons and vehicles of all kinds in the procession. Our opponents admit, by actual count, that there were seven thousand nine hundred in procession. This was the count made at the Custom House by the opponents of Fremont. Another count made on Water street, states it at 9,000. As it was next to impossible to make an accurate count, we may presume that there were at the least ten thousand in procession. In addition to this, the Western trains brought in twenty car loads, after the procession reached the ground, which would have swelled the number materially.

About 1200 arrived in the Western cars too late to go into procession, and very few persons in the two cities, went into it unless they had some active duty to perform in some device or trade.

It was indeed a wonderful procession, and will be long remembered by the tens of thousands who witnessed the brilliant spectacle.

The grounds set apart for the Convention, were the North Commons, Allegheny. Four stands were erected, and speaking was kept up at all of them. There was no shade and the dust and heat were dreadful. Notwithstanding these drawbacks, it is not exaggeration to say, that fully one hundred thousand people visited the grounds during the afternoon, and the stands were always surrounded by as many as could hear. If there had been any shade, or the weather had been less oppressive, the crowds would have been larger.

The city throughout the day presented the aspect of a joyous holiday. Great numbers of stores and shops were shut up, the work was suspended on new buildings, and the manufactories were closed.

Take it all in all our Convention was a great success. It has cheered the hearts of the friends of Freedom, and carried dismay into the ranks of the pro-slavery party. The procession gave unmistakable evidence that the workingmen, the mechanics, the farmers, and the laborers are with us. Only one week ago, the Buchanan men, after the labor of weeks, held a Convention, and their procession contained only some fifteen hundred persons, with a few banners and flags, but no exhibition of trades, or manifestation that the masses were interested in their cause.

The friends of Freedom have every reason to take courage. Their cause is just and the people are with them. A few weeks more spent for the cause of the country and humanity, and the victory is won.

Immense Procession of Fremonters.

APPEARANCE OF THE CITY—STREETS HUNG WITH FLAGS, MOTTOES, &c.—THE PROCESSION—THE CONVENTION.

Yesterday was a gala day in Pittsburgh, such as has never before been seen in this city on a strictly political occasion. The citizen upon awakening in the morning, even if he had known nothing of the approaching celebration, could have told, by the cessation of the hum of innumerable mills, factories and shops, that the day was one of great general interest. In that respect it was like a Sabbath. At an early hour the thousands intending to take part in the proceedings of the day, began to prepare themselves, flags were thrown from nearly every window, mottoes and devices thrown across the streets, wagons, carriages, buggies, horses prepared. By nine o'clock all the streets of the route published, were taken up with the delegations which arrived in immense numbers from different counties, preparatory to the formation of the procession.

DECORATION OF STREETS.

We took a rapid glance at the preparations made by the merchants and other citizens on the line of the procession, to do honor to the occasion, and are unable to go into details. On Penn street large flags were thrown out from nearly every private residence from Wayne st. to Hay st., many of them very beautiful. The beautiful stretchers of pine were thrown across on each side of Hand street, which street, as was Wayne, was also profusely decorated. The merchants on Liberty street spared no expense to make that thoroughfare brilliant with flags and banners. At the foot of Hay street a stretcher was extended across Liberty with the following inscription:

"THE MAN FOR THE HOUR, J. C. FREMONT."

From Hare's Hotel, the following device:

"Free Speech, Free Soil, Free Men, Free Press and Fremont."

On the reverse, a representation of the race to the White House. From Mitchell, Herron & Co's warehouse,

"KANSAS, VERMONT AND MAINE 5—2."

"FREE SOIL, FREE SPEECH, AND FREMONT."

A great many other stretchers also decorated the streets, amid numberless handsome flags.

Market street was equally brilliant; indeed, the merchants of the city seemed to vie with each other in this respect.

From nearly every store on Wood street, were flung out banners, devices and flags. Many of the inscriptions were capital hits. Seventh, Sixth, Fifth, Fourth, Third, Second and Water streets were also profusely decorated. From the Monongahela House was thrown out the largest flag in the city—a superb affair.

The Fremont Headquarters had flags from every window, presenting a brilliant appearance. The time at which we write is too late to permit us to enter at length into a description of the appearance of the city, which was such as was never before seen.

THE CROWD.

It is variously estimated that from 60,000 to 100,000 persons were on the streets at the time the procession started. Every window, in addition, on the route, was crowded with ladies. The scene was very enlivening. After the procession started, the enthusiasm in the ranks and among the outsiders was intense, and a constant succession of cheers was kept up along the whole route.

THE MARSHAL AND HIS ASSISTANTS.

John D. Bailey, Esq., and his assistants, had their arrangements complete to prevent confusion in the formation of the ranks. From the beginning to the end everything passed off well. We give below the officers of the procession:

The route, which we give below, was strictly adhered to, except in one instance where a large delegation which had arrived too late, obstructed the street.

The procession formed on Liberty street, the right resting on Wayne street, and proceeding along Wayne to Penn, along Penn to Hay, along Hay to Liberty, across Liberty to Fourth, up Fourth to Wood, down Wood to Water, along Water to Smithfield, up Smithfield to Liberty, along Liberty to Wayne, down Wayne to Penn, up Penn to Mechanics', along Mechanics' to the bridge, across bridge to Chesnut, up Chesnut to Ohio, down Ohio to the place designated by the committee of arrangements (North Commons Allegheny city.)

THE PROCESSION.

The procession started from the corner of Wayne and Liberty-sts., at a little after ten o'clock, though a number of delegations joined in from the side streets, as it passed them on the route as published.

Four Aids to the Chief Marshal, John D. Bailey, Esq., with handsome silk scarfs, heavily furnished with gold lace, led off the procession. They were followed by a brass band and twelve two-horse carriages containing the Committees on Reception and Invitation, and these were followed by eleven horsemen. Then came another band, preceding a beautiful flag, carried by a delegation on foot. This delegation also bore a banner descriptive of Old Buck on the Cincinnati Platform, which has broken down. The next banner was oval-shaped, the centre-piece rolling round with the wind, and inscribed around it were the words "Sin Sin Naughty Platform." An elegant design, large, arched at the top and decorated with silk trimmings, having an accurate likeness of Fremont in the centre, attracted much attention.

The West Newton delegation, with flags and banners and a brass band followed. One of their banners had the inscription "No aggression upon Kansas." Another a representation of Brooks attacking Sumner; another banner bore the inscription "Free Press, Free Land and Fremont." This was followed by another inscribed "Our Platform—Free Press, Free Speech, Free Soil, Fremont." Another banner had upon it "There is a North." A Melodeon flag brought up the rear of the delegation.

The Beaver county delegation, headed by a brass band was the next in order. They had a number of banners. One of the banners had the representation of a car just arrived at the White House, with the inscription "Pathfinders Car." The Beaver Falls Club followed with flags and inscribed "Home Industry, Free Kansas, and the Union as it is," "Fremont and Dayton" &c. &c.

The Lawrence county delegation followed with banners and flags, inscribed as follows:—"Lawrence county good for 2000 majority," "Not to be enslaved," "Life Liberty and the Pursuit of happiness," "Liberty in Kansas." A brass band headed the delegation.

A brass band and twelve horsemen followed. These were succeeded by a six horse wagon covered with flags and banners. An old negro fiddler occupied a seat playing plantation tunes and breakdowns. Then came three four horse wagons filled with men and three one horse buggies, covered with pine. These were followed by a two horse wagon, in which was borne a banner inscribed, "We are all Jeffersonian Democrats." Two one horse wagons followed and two one horse buggies.

Then came the "Freemen of Shaler Township," followed by the employees at the Etna Works. They bore a banner descriptive of the interior of a Rolling Mill. Two one horse buggies and twelve horsemen followed.

The Sharpsburgh delegation then came, covered with banners and flags, inscribed "Not one foot for Slavery," "That Country Prospers where Labor is Respected and Remunerated," "Pennsylvania's Favorite Son—Not Ten Cent Jimmy."

A two-horse wagon bore the designating banner of the Manchester Fremont Club. Then came a four-horse omnibus and a two-horse wagon, in the latter of which was borne a banner inscribed, "Fremont's the man for us: Oh have you heard the news from Maine. The ball is rolling on." There is also on it a representation of a ball, inscribed "Iowa, Vermont, Maine," which is being rolled on at a rapid rate. Two two-horse wagons followed, in the latter of which was a banner inscribed as follows:

"Who ever heard in all his life,
Of a candidate without a wife."

Then came another two-horse wagon. A one-horse wagon bore a representation of "Buck's Rotten Platform." The planks are all broken, and various members of the Buchanan party are tumbling through, some head foremost, others sideways, and all with a pitiable expression of countenance. A two-horse buggy closed the delegation.

Lower St. Clair made its first appearance in a two-horse wagon, with a banner inscribed, "Lower St. Clair will do its duty." A number of flags and banners were in this wagon. A four horse wagon, followed, with banners. This was succeeded by a two-horse wagon from Mount Washington. They had banners inscribed "Lower St. Clair O. K." "We keep our powder dry for Disunionists." Then came a four horse wagon, with numerous banners. "Free Labor is the Natural Capital of the Country;" "Every Heart a Home for Liberty." In a two-horse wagon, which followed were the following inscriptions: "Free Heart and Frugal Hand," "No competition with Slave Labor," "Kansas must and shall be Free." A two-horse wagon followed with a banner—"Have you heard the news from Maine: 26,000 majority for Kansas Free." The next vehicle was a four-horse wagon, with a banner—"Ten cents may do for slaves, but not for Free men," "Keep your niggers at home." A five horse wagon, with outriders, followed. In it were banners inscribed "God-made man free, before Law made them Slaves," "We will give them Jessie." Then came a five-horse coal wagon, filled with miners. Eight mules followed ridden by miners. Then came a six-horse wagon, inscribed "Old Buck can't win." A number of buggies closed up this delegation.

The South Pittsburgh delegations came in fine style. A two horse wagon carried the banner of the club. The Washington Works of South Pittsburgh made a fine display in a six horse wagon, which was covered with a flag, and banners representing the interior of the works. The Fremont Headquarters had flags from every window, presenting a brilliant appearance. The time at which we write is too late to permit us to enter at length into a description of the appearance of the city, which was such as was never before seen.

The Sharpsburgh delegation then came, covered with banners and flags, inscribed "Not one foot for Slavery," "That Country Prospers where Labor is Respected and Remunerated," "Pennsylvania's Favorite Son—Not Ten Cent Jimmy."

A two-horse wagon bore the designating banner of the Manchester Fremont Club. A two-horse buggy closed the delegation.

Lower St. Clair made its first appearance in a two-horse wagon, with a banner inscribed, "Lower St. Clair will do its duty." A number of flags and banners were in this wagon. A four horse wagon, followed, with banners. This was succeeded by a two-horse wagon from Mount Washington. They had banners inscribed "Lower St. Clair O. K." A two-horse wagon followed with a banner—"Have you heard the news from Maine: 26,000 majority for Kansas Free." The next vehicle was a four-horse wagon, with a banner—"Ten cents may do for slaves, but not for Free men," "Keep your niggers at home." A five horse wagon, with outriders, followed. In it were banners inscribed "God-made man free, before Law made them Slaves," "We will give them Jessie." Then came a five-horse coal wagon, filled with miners. Eight mules followed ridden by miners. Then came a six-horse wagon, inscribed "Old Buck can't win." A number of buggies closed up this delegation.

The South Pittsburgh delegations came in fine style. A two horse wagon carried the banner of the club. The Washington Works of South Pittsburgh made a fine display in a six horse wagon, which was covered with a flag, and banners representing the interior of the works. They had also some of the machinery used by the workmen.

The Border Ruffian Caffy handed by one horse, drove down thousands of applause. Long necked bottles of whiskey cover a table, around which sat as blood-thirsty a looking crew as one would care about seeing. Scowling faces, were enough, but the ominous looking knives and muskets which abounded, completed the character as obtained from the most authentic accounts.

In a one-horse wagon which followed, was a representation of Fremont loosening the shackles of a slave. In the next wagon, was a banner, "Mechanics for Fremont and Free Kansas." The Iron workers of Chartiers township, made their appearance in a two-horse wagon, with banners, representing the interior of a mill, and another bearing the inscription, "We work for ten cents a day." They also had a banner representing a soliloquy of James Buchanan as to Pennsylvania, which we could not catch with sufficient accuracy to report. A fife and drum band closed this delegation.

Of all the desolate looking affairs in the world, the Buchanan workers in the two-horse wagon following, were the worst. The vehicle was fashioned to an approximation in appearance to a very dilapidated old shop. Through the broken windows could be seen a skeleton men working at various trades. They were old greybeards, famished looking young men, and half desperate looking middle-aged men, "got up to perfection," as our theatrical friends would say, working at shoemaking, blacksmithing and other trades, very deceptively indeed. What with their dress, their pipes, and the general appearance of the shop, they succeeded to admiration in the characters they assumed. Yells of laughter followed them at every step.

The Birmingham Glee Club occupied a wagon immediately following, and enlivened the scene with good singing. They had numerous flags, some of which were inscribed "The Rights of the States, and the Union of the States." A German delegation followed in wagons.

The West Deer delegation followed in two and four-horse wagons, carrying banners, one of which was inscribed—"West Deer. The Banner Township, will maintain her position in 1856!"

A two horse wagon bore the Variety Works delegation. The men were engaged in making coffee mills. They made a good appearance.

The Novelty Works delegation followed. In addition to their implements of trade, they had an immense pair of scales on the "Platform of Freedom." Fremont was in one scale, and Buck in the other, and the latter kicked the beam—"He won't do, he's too light."

The Tarentum and East Deer delegations were the next in order. They bore numerous banners. Two workmen, of the Pittsburgh Day, followed on horseback. Their clothing was made up of patches, their hats were shocking, but all was explained by the announcement that they were receiving ten cents a day for wages.

The Lawrenceville Fremont Club, followed, splendid in flags and banners.

But the most impressive feature of the procession was the two-horse buggy which followed, containing as it did a very venerable man, who was, as the banner hung upon the outside announced, "A SOLDIER OF THE REVOLUTION."

Immediately following, in a two-horse buggy, rode "A SOLDIER OF 1812." Both this and the preceding vehicles were covered with wreaths.

Four two-horse buggies and several horsemen followed; they were handsomely decorated.

The capital hit of the day it is conceded was the banner carried in a one-horse wagon, with a first-rate copy of the knave of clubs; underneath was the inscription—"Sally Brooks."

In the succeeding delegations (but what delegations they were we could not ascertain,) were a number of banners upon which were inscribed good devices, as—"We'll take Sebastopol," "Kansas Brutalized," "Free Hearts and Frugal Hands," "Free Labor the Natural Capital of the County," "Every Heart a home for Liberty." In a one-horse wagon was a gallows with an effigy of Brooks, above which was inscribed "The last of Brooks." The wagon was occupied by the Third Ward, Allegheny, Vigilance Committee.

A whip-making establishment occupied one of the following wagons. In the centre rose a tremendous whip; workmen were busy in the various departments of the trade. A number of buggies and wagons followed. In one of them was a painting of the White House, with Jessie called "The Salt River Packet. Faro tender. Old Buck Captain."

A ten horse wagon conveyed a brass band and the Pathfinder Glee Club. The latter made a fine appearance.

The Fourth Ward, Allegheny, delegation was the next in order. Another detachment of Border Ruffians occupied a wagon devoted to them. If possible they exceeded in their infernal appearance the first lot. They were led by Atchison and Stringfellow on horseback. We cannot imagine a more ridiculous appearance than they presented.

Among the banners of this Ward was one with this inscription: "What's a Buck without a Doe."

A planing machine from John A. Bloomer's mill followed in a two horse wagon. This was followed by the Akron Glee Club wagon.

Then followed a large number of vehicles. Messrs. Nease & Nixon of the Excelsior Boat Yard, 1st Ward, Allegheny, had a large coal barge on wheels, filled with their workmen. The 1st Ward delegation followed on foot and in a wagon, with banners, inscriptions, flags and music. The other wards of Allegheny followed in succession.

The Duquesne Borough Delegation had a yawl called "The Pathfinder," containing 31 girls in white as States, and one in mourning as Kansas.

A five horse wagon carried a banner which represented "Popular Sovereignty under Democratic Rule" And several men being killed in Kansas. Another—"Holly Brooks going to Washington." Another, Old Buck with a negro on his back—"I carry too much weight, my platform has broken,—my Maine prop has fallen."

This delegation was followed by a body of Turners, (German) with banners &c. Then a number of boys dressed in white, then the Goddess of Liberty, by a little girl, in a canopied car; then any number of buggies and carriages.

A two horse wagon carried a banner with a white mechanic asking a man for work. Carpenter—"Can you give me work?" Man—"No, I've just bought two negroes."

The Young Americans of the 3d ward, Allegheny, made a fine appearance.

The Paviers and Laborers of Allegheny, followed with the following device,—"We pave the way for Fremont."

The Horse Club of the 2d ward, Allegheny, followed; they numbered seventy-eight.

The steamboat builders next appeared with a boat half-finished, and they at work, with the inscription above them—"Ten cents won't do."

Then a steamboat without a cabin, with appropriate banners. The 1st ward City Painters occupied the boat.

A number of wagons followed. In one of them was this device—"Shriekers for Freedom—Iowa, Vermont, Maine."

Hare's Hotel turned out a fine delegation.

The Ribbons, Printers and Lithographers of the city, comprised twelve wagons, carrying banners, significant of the position the Press has assumed in the questions of the day. Three or four presses were kept in operation during the procession, and songs were scattered through the crowd. A printer's devil, in the fabulous guise of the real devil, horns, hoofs and all, ministered to the presses.

The merchants of Liberty-st, were out on horseback to the number of one hundred and ten.

The 2d ward Glee Club were in a four-horse wagon. They made a fine appearance, and as usual did good singing. One of their banners represented Brooks over the Treasury Safe with a hammer, while Jonathan on the other side presents a pistol at him.

H. H. Ryan's chairmakers were at work in a two-horse wagon, and they were followed by the workmen of the Pittsburgh Steel Works.

The Fourth Ward Woolly Horse Club was the next in order, and the procession ended with 51 voters on horse back, who are about to cast their first vote for their choice, Fremont.

We are aware that we have not done justice to the various excellent devices, flags, and other features in the procession enumerated above, and we have been obliged to omit many others. It was a task of much difficulty to accomplish to gather the inscriptions and features of such a procession as that of yesterday, and we did our best to get an accurate account.

STATISTICS—SIGN IS PASTED.

Various counts were made yesterday from different positions. Col. Foster, of the Dispatch, made his count at the start, on Wayne-st., and consequently he omitted many delegations which came in from side streets, and the very large delegation which looked with the main procession on Grant. His count, excluding women, boys and musicians, even there, reached six thousand.

A prominent democrat made a count on the corner of 21 Street and Wood:

Men in wagons and afoot.....	6,788
Draymen	141
Others on horseback	646
Musicians.....	265
Women.....	134
Boys	658
Girls	88
Negroes.....	80
Total,.....	7,749

Several Democrats made a count on Smithfield street, which reached 10,000.

Without doubt there were at least ten thousand in the procession, taking in all the delegations.

The procession occupied nearly two hours and a half in passing the corner of Water and Smithfield streets, and it is estimated that it was from seven to nine miles in length.

The following is our count of horses and vehicles.

THE CONVENTION

Arrived at the North Commons, the crowd soon covered that capacious ground, below Federal street. There were four stands erected, to accommodate as many of those who wished to hear the speeches as it was possible. Never before was as large a crowd gathered together in this city. It is estimated that one hundred thousand persons were on the ground, during the afternoon. The streets were constantly crowded.

The following were announced as the officers of the day:

From Stand No. 2, by German orators.

From Stand No. 3, by Mr. Astor, of Ohio, Thos. T. Moran, Phila., Gen. L. V. Bierech, of Ohio, Gov. Roberts, of Kansas, Gen. C. T. Hinkelman, of Mansfield, O., J. E. Wharton, of Massillon, O., and Thomas Howard and J. M. Kirkpatrick, of this city. The speeches were, as may be expected, of the most able character, and were listened to with the most profound interest.

The day came to a conclusion at last, and the immense concourse dispersed highly gratified with the success of the efforts to make this demonstration one of the grandest and most imposing in the history of any political party.

EVENING MEETINGS.

Two meetings were held in the city and two in Allegheny in the evening. They were largely attended.
