Thanksgiving is peculiarly a New England insti-tution. We'are indebted to the Puritan fathers for it, as well as for many other excellent things in the frame-work of our society and government. Ever since the pilgrims of the Mayflower made good their foothold upon Plymouth Rock has it been observed in the New England states, until it has grown up to be, with their descendants, the day of all other days in the year. It is only within a few years past that it has traveled beyond its original New England bounds. We believe that the late Gov Shank was the first to appoint a day of Thanksgiving in Pennsylvania; and the example set by him has gradually found and the example set by him has gradually found and the example set by him has gradually found as a few example set by him has gradually found as few example set by him has gradually f for it, as well as for many other excellent things ration who can remember when Christimss was almost altegether unknown as a holidry among their descendants. The observance of that day, with them, is about as recent as that of Thanksgiving day is, that it is a concentration of each.

The peculiar characteristic of a Puritan Thanksgiving day is, that it is a concentration of many holidsys into one. All the pent up vivanity of a year finds work to the mutual good of many holidsys into one. All the pent up vivanity of a year finds work in that day. It is a concentration of many holidsys into one. All the pent up vivanity of a year finds work in that day. It is a concentration of many holidsys into one. All the pent up vivanity of a year finds work in other day. It is a concentration of many holidsys into one, and the behavior of the day in the day. It is a concentration of many holidsys into one.
