

By the time night set in the brave official had become what is sometimes termed "blazing drunk." The "Abolitionists," the future fate of Kansas, the virsion of the polls stocked with Yankees and the dignity of his office all pressed upon him, which, with the weight of bad liquor, completely overcame him. Is abort Brown was drunk, and at a late hour was borne reeking to his quarters, "seen of the South" prostate, shorn of his glory and unconscious of the position to which he had been reduced. During the night he slept off a good part of the femes of his debauch. Morning came, and with it Brown the official, trying his legs on a flight of stairs from the cellar, cursing as he climbed all abolitiondom for having; stolen that grecious four quires of paper, "string, pencil and all—Thus was lost the labor of many days. These are written, more over, with the pencil which hangs to the book so as to facilities the process of erasure if necessary. The law is not very stringent in its requirements about the ispelling of the names of men found at the "Planters' House" of as to what sort of an instrument may be used in entering them upon the list.

It may be inferred from the above general statements that mistates and mishaps some ities occur by which a wast amount of Brown's valuable labor is lost to the community in which he lives and to the world in general. A case in point occurred while our informant remained in Kanesa. The unfortunate Brown had been pressed with official business in an unusual degree one day, and in consequence the tally of whicky had become quite full and Mr. Brown also.
