Witnesses proved, however, the latter was the name he wentby in his own neighborhood, and the plea was not entertained. The case then went to trial on the merits, when defendant produced a bill of sale, dated previously to the time the bill of indiciment was found, of the fixtures and furniture of the house, where the liquor is alleged to have been sold, to another party, since which time the latter has had charge of the establishment. On the other hand, it was alleged that this was only a species of under-letting, for the purpose of evading the law, as the alleged purchaser was merely a bar keeper for defendant. Verdiet guilty, and defendant sentenced to pay a fine of $100, one-third awarded to the informer, and the residue to the School Board of the Fourth Ward, Allegheny.
