PITTSBURGH: SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 9, 1857.

WAR TO THE KELTS, AND THE KELTS TO THE HILT."-The speech of Secretary Stanton, at Lawrence, as given in the New York Times, National Eve, and other presses, was toned down to a lamb-like temper; but as given by those who heard it, it breather slaughter in true Border lian style. The Kansas correspondent of the Cincianati Commercial writes:

Instead of attempting to conciliate the Free State men and treat them fairly, they are to be subjected to the most villainous code of laws ever framed, and if they will not submit to those laws—laws which have been condemned by every reasonable man have been condemned by every reasonable man both north and south, then it is "war to the ing, plantation manner of the Tennesses upstar boys in the least. Upon this point the N. Y. Courier & Enquirer "The Free State men of Kansas are not to be initimidated into submission to the spurious and infamous emantments of the begue Legislature. Those enactments have never yet been enforced; and they will, we are firmly convinced, remain unenforced to the end of the chapter. Even at best, they stand no chance of being socepted; but least of all will these high threats, and these imperious doctrines of the necessity of obedience, avail to produce submission. The proclamation which Secretary Stanton made at Lawrence of "war to the knife, and the high to the hill," (these are his own words,) unless these edicts of the so-called Legislature should be complied with, is the very worst of all possible methods for gaining this end: Intelligent American freemen, the genuine descendants of men who resisted usurpation and syrampy to the death, can never be The Pree State men of Kansas are not to be It is pregumption and weakness to think it.

For some two years or more previous to this present one, a good deal of activity has prevailed in the boot and shoe market, and a competition among the extensive traders which has had a fendency to reduce prices below "living" rates. We quote segial from The Boston Traveller the followings. Bome of the boot and shoe manufacturers are now beginning to feel the effect of the low prices obtained for goods during the last two years. The high cost of living and losses by bad debts have esten up their meagre profite, and so encreached upon their creditors properly, that they have been obliged to stop payment. Falliers are in these modern times a matter of necessity. It is the only check in the maching rails. of the article has been noticeable, the price still holding up until now.

As far as our own observation goes, there has not been an extra amount of the raw material, hides, pushed into the market during the present year, but it has probably been overstocked by the constant and large supplies which have been going forward for a long time and accumulated in the various storehouses in Boston and the Shoe and Leather. manufacturies of the east. The number of hides east forward through this market or used here from the first of December to the first of May 55.71 lides and 476 bundles of the same, and about 1800 rolls of receipts by river and rallway. If during the whole time above accounted for, and even for a year previous all the avenues of trade with the east have been pouring their tributes into the market in the same proportion we need not be surprised at the idea generally expressed among legitimate dealers in New Esgland that the large stock of hides and leather now upon the market is samply sufficient to meet the healthy demands of the trade and produce a reaction in the price.
