JOHN COCHRAN & BROS., "One of Dr. Ross's slaves was taken for debt and sold at auction. A Preshyterian of East Tennessee bought him, and was about to sell him to the far South, when the slave made his escape and hid in the swamps for over a year, like Dred Sout. He was lately eaptured, and his master had three hundred and thirty lashes inflicted upon his bare back. He was then put in irons and sent to the southern market, to be used up in the rice swamps. The ministry, of whose chares the cruel master was a member, thought such indumantly should be rebuked, and brought it to the notice of the church. The consequence was the minister has been obliced to fire from the state of the most reckless and abandoned brought which can infest any city.
