and we trust that Missouri has answered the question. There lies the business to which Kentucky, Maryland, Delaware and Virginia have soon to address themselves; that's the true issue! Demagogaces may cry "Down!" bown!" till they become hoarse as ballad-singers—there's no. "Down!" to it. It will rise like the Ghost of Banquo to confront them at every turning and push them from their very seats. Missouri has struck the key note in this grand new march of progress; has thrown to the dogs these dead or odying issues which, never had more than a hectio flush of existence. Let the great State of Kentucky take her place beside Missouri; let her shake, off the incubus that has pressed like a mountain of lead upon her and stifled her fresh young blood at its very fountains; let her seize the occasion which now ofters, to aid and counsel Missouri in this grand enterprise of emancipation, and soon she will see this Moloch of Modern Democracy forsaking its bloody altars on her These men are now, eagerly asking, what next 2 firms the report of the suicide of General Russ.
