cannot learn that the present excited state of money matters outsubs in any important degree to dry goods, grocery, importing, or other regular branches of busines. The banks report no remarkable pres-sure for money from their customers, and the recoun-drance in rates of paper's is the result of the unset-lied state of public confidence rather than in any examine of money of imparend number of the the state. There are certain classes of people who scrupla not to perpetrate the most flagrant wrongs pla not to perpetrate the most flagrant wrong scarcity of money or increased pressure of paper on sgainst society whenever an opportunity is offered them, and then by a mode of reasoning dealers such facilities as are absolutely needed. We think the foling of the street was more confident to their dealers and philanthropic grounds. The back hard the street was more confident to the tree the street was more confident to the street was more and matters settle back into the old channels."
