EDITORS and PROPRIETORS. PITTSBURGH: PRIDAY MORNING, SEPT., 4, 1857. READING MATTER ON EACH PAGE OF THIS PAPER.

ELEDING WATTER OF EACH PAGE OF THIS PAPER. THE Pennsylvanian, in order to satisfy its Philadelphia readers, goes into a studied effort to show that the resolutions by the late demo-cratic Convention do not mean epposition to the collection of railroad taxes, but merely express the opinion that their legality should be ascer-tained by constitutional means. It gives the seventh resolution and says: "What is a fair interpretation of this resolution? In the first place, it shows "hostility to the imposi-tion of taxes for railroad purposes." Certainly this may assume without being made liable to the characted. In the second place, it sets forth the determination of the tax-payre to resistby all constitutional and legal

But, we take the liberty of assuring the Penngifennian, while such was the nominal pur-port of the resolution it quotes, such was not its intention. The very fact that it has been set interpreted, both by the locofoco presshere and in Philadelphia, while to the ears of the people here it has been interpreted in an entirely different sense, proves the thorough dishonesty and du-plicity of the party, and shows it and its can-didates to be totally unworthy of confidence.— Honest men, in their utterances, never leare any room to doubt what they mean; and the men who clothe their expressions in words enpable of a double meaning are invariably dishongst.
