the present outbreak, has had its run. That oircumstance may have had its influence, but the real cause lies away back of all this, in plundered princedoms, diaregarded laws and customs which, silly in themselves, were never-theles harmless and in the eyes of the Hindoos sacred, and therefore to be respected. For ex-ample, the East India Company has uniformly diaregarded the Hindoo law of inheritance, which is intimately connected with the Hindoo religion. An intelligent writer says: "According to the sacred law- book of Maun."
