Mr. Buchanna, as the representative in Congress of the peculiar interests of that State, was always, we believe, something of a protectionist. But now, with the iron interest of the Union covering twenty times the capital and labor which it commanded when Mr. Buchanna was a member of the United States Sense, had with our numerous cotton fectories, North and South, threatened with bankrupicy, from the high price which the raw material commands in England, and from the low prices of English cattors could in our own markets, a little word in a member of a word of a suppose the suppose of the suppose strumental in proventing its long continuance. What is to be done—what are our manufacturers to do "—what are men willing to work, but can get no employment, to do !—are questions more easily asked than answered, and which appeal to the best instincts of our natures.

Men, women, fathers, mothers, children must cat, whether they have work or not, and yet there are hundreds who had rather labor for half price than to become the dependents of others, and who would be satisfied with a half loaf, obtained with money earned with their own hands, rather than have the whole loaf supplied by the hand of charity. Should the present condition of things be of long continuance, this class of persons will require looking after, as wall as those more ready to make known their wants. We hope our mills and manufactures will not long be clossed; but if they are, before spring we shall witness harder times, and a thousand times more suffering than the temporary suspension of the banks would occasion.

Our manufacturers are passing through hard times. They would do better could they do it without great losses. Nobody can blane them for shutting down the gate, or cutting off the steam; but we do say that men of influence and means "Judl oxert themselves in doing all in their power towards enabling them to move on again, furnishing work for thore willing, may desirous to labor for what they eat, drink and wer.

in circulation. Specie, or other small currency, is the life-blood of business, and if it be wanting to any considerable extent, business will languish, stagnate or decay in proportion as its life-blood is wanting.

The propensity to hoard specie is one of the lowest and meanest vices of the human mind. It is the very essence of selfashness. The propensity is naturally heightened in times of panic like the present, and often seizes upon good men who in ordinary seasons would be entirely free from it. Let all who have as spark of kindly and liberal feeling "resist the temptation and it will flee from them."

There is still safficient gold and silver in the country to keep the wheels of business in motion and thereby enable honest industry by daily labor to earn its daily bread. Whatever of want and suffering may prevail this winter among those who would labor, but can find no employment, will be largely owing to the hoarding of specie. Those who cause this want to fall upon the poor, will receive their pay in due season if it be true that "with the measure ye mete withal, the same shall be measured to you again."

Persurt of Specie under Difficulties.—A Cincinnati assorting broker visited a bank in Lafayette, Ind., with $7,000 of bills, demanding specie for the same. OPERATIVES. WITHOUT EMPLOYMENT IN PRILADELPHIA.—WE are told that at this moment there are thirty thousand operatives and working men of various kinds without employment in the city and vicinity of Philadelphia. Many of these have families, and thus distress may be said to extend already directly and indirectly to a hundred thousand souls. In Mannyunk and Frankford alone, no less than fifteen thousand persons, men, women, and children, who have heretofore had regular employment for years, are now wandering about in illeness and anxiety, the factories and work-shops, in which they have heretofore been engaged, being closed. This is the condition of affairs now, and matters are likely to become much worse as winter approaches, unless some means of succor and assistance be afforded. This is no fancy sketch, it is the simple truth.—Pennsylvania Enquirer Oct 9.

When General Moreau, who forsook the colors of Napoleon, and was afterwards killed fighting against his former commander, in Germany, was in the city of Boston, he was much courted and sought after as a lion of the first quality. On one occasion he was invited to Cambridge to nttend the commencement exercises. In the course of the day a musical society of under-graduates sang a then very popular ode, the chorus of which was, "To-morrow, to-morrow, to-morrow." Moreau, who was imperfectly acquainted with our language, fancied that they were complimenting him, and at every recurrence of the burden, which he interpreted, "To Moreau, to Moreau, to Moreau, the rows and bowed grace fully to the singers gallery, pressing his laced chapeau to his heart. We can easily imaginate the summer of the spectators who were in the secret, and the mortification of the Frenchman, when he discovered his mistake.
