parallel to this astounding exertion of memory and concentrativeness."—N. Y. Trib.

In perusing the above paragraph we were reminded of some extraordinary instances of the power of memory, which we have observed in the course anding—instances which, in our the course that more markelless than the concentrations and the course that the course th with it is not been more marvellous than the

A father of the order had preached that year at Rome, and was listened to by multitudes of people of every rank and ago, who were amused with his ridiculous manner of speaking, and his gestures which were copied from the theatre. Alexius had been but likewise represented the very voice, and look and action of the speaker.

Dr. FCLUBA, an Englisman, had such a memory, that he once undertook, in passing to and fro from Templo Bar (London,) to the farthest conduit in Cheapside, to tell at his return, every sign as it stood in order, on both sides of the way, repeating them either backwards or forwards, as should be desired; which he did exactly, not missing or misplacing one, to the astonishment of those who heard him. But what was more strange still, was his manner or writing. He would write near the margin the first words of every line down to the foot of the paper; then, by beginning at the head again, fill up every one of these lines, which, without any interlineation or spaces, but with the full and equal length, would so adjust the sense and matter, that he could not do it better, as he sometimes remarked, if he had written all out in a conjugate of the time of the paper of the time of those which, without any interlineation or spaces, but with the full and equal length, would so adjust the sense and matter, that he could not do it better, as he sometimes remarked, if he had written all out in a conjugate of the time of those sense self-denial, to enable him or the total title, do thy diligence ignally to give of that little.

of his children, whom Mr. McKibben had kindly sent in to see him, proceeded directly to the Railroad station, and took his seat in the afternoon train, which was then about to depart. Here his enraged brothers-in-law presented themselves, and fired at him no less than eleven the major which took effect in the lower part themselves, and free at nim no less than the shots, two of which took effect in the lower part of his body, causing severe but perhaps not mortal wounds. a more cowardly attempt at assassination than the above, nor have we ever known such universal contempt for the men and the act as perrades the community in relation to this outrage. As cowards would do, who feared to face death like men, they sought their victim where they supposed they could shed his blood without the possibility of harm befalling themselves. They waited until they found him seated in the car, in the midst of his fellow passengers, little dreaming of harm, and then, without a moment's warning, they commenced an attack upon him from opposite ends of the car, not only jeoparding the proposition of the car, not only jeoparding the first of the season. The Power of Memory.

"On Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, Mr. Paulsen commenced playing five games, blindfold, simultaneously—a feat not only unparabled in the history of chees, but almost incredible of belief. Without the slightlest mistake he continued his exertions until 11 P. Mr., when our reporter left. His opposents were Messre. S. Heilbuth, Robert J. Dodge, Oscanyan, Frere and D. Haws.

"The announcement of such an astonishing performance drew together a crowd of disting preformance drew together a crowd of disting to the analyzing the games. Monsieur Thalberg, the great planist, stayed, till 10 o'clock, not merely displaying interest in the proceedings, but also analyzing the play. The flom, John Van Burer came in twice during the verning, and we also regarded Capt. Updegraff, of the United States Navy, Judge Whiting, Hickson W. Field, Eaq., John Jay, Esq., &c.

"Up to 11 P. M. none of the games were concluded, although in all of them Mr. Paulsen had the decided advantage. History can cite on parallel to this astounding acretion of memory and concentrativeness."—N. Y. Trib.

Then why undertake to do it? If it could be Mr. Paulsen, astonishing as they are. | no atonement for what he deems past wrongs, We will cite some of them as appropriate to the what was the use of staining his hands with occasion, and of interest to the general reader. We have collected them from various sources, madman as well as a coward? California, it and in most, if not in all of the cases our author- scems to us, is unfortunate in her Congressmen. were copied from the theatre. Alexius had been present at one of his sermons, which he soon after repeated to the fathers of the convent, for the sake of diversion; and this he did to that perfection, that he not only preserved the order, method and even the words of the discourse, but likewise represented the very voice, and look and action of the speaker.

A crisis in financial affairs, such as perhaps matter, that he could not do it better, as he sometimes remarked, if he had written all out in a continued series.

Rev. Charles Bertheau, an English clergyman, had so good's memory that it might be said he never forget anything of what he ever asw, read or heard. He understood ecclesiastical history so well that he could always be consulted on it with safety. He would at any time name the persons, and even the most minute circumstances of time and place relating to the events upon which he was consulted. He lived and died in the last century.

La Motte, a French bon vicant, once terrified a young author who had been reading a new tragedy to him, by accusing him of the plaiger-sim of one entire act, which he repeated to the simulation of the plaiger-sim of one entire act, which he repeated to the ice. A benevolent lady in this city tole come to my knowledge. But the mention of one is me of one entire act, which he repeated to the poet, after hearing it but once read. When La Motte had onjoyed his joke, he relieved the unhappy author by confessing to him that the feat was accomplished by his powerful memory.

That of Quintus Hortentius, the pleader and contemporary of Cicero was remarkable. Upon a challenge that was made to him, he remained a whole day, at an auction, and repeated in order the several things which had been sold—to whom—and at what time. His recital being compared with the account taken by the Clerk, it appeared that his memory had not made him mistake in one particular.

We will close our article, which we might, if space permitted, extend to a greater length, with a reference to the extraordinary power of memory possessed by Simonides, to whom is the note of the content of the content of the poor are never sent empty away.)

memory possessed by Simonides, to whom is ascribed the invention of local memory. When Scopas and his guests were killed by the falling it is but one of many that call upon our charity if each one would deny themselves something, it is but a few dollars or a few stillings, worth ssoribed the invention of local memory. When Scopas and his guests were killed by the falling of the room in which they had assembled, they were so disfigured that they could not be distinguished from each other. However, it was of importance to distinguish them; for those who wanted to bury them were desirous of doing this office each to his relation. Simonides extricated them from this difficulty. Herecollected the place where each of the large number of guests had sat, and by this means was capable of informing the relations which was the person each of the mwas to bury. Reflecting afterwards upon the importance of order to preserve easily the ideas of objects, he invented the method of annexing them to certain places. Cicero, in one of his orations, styled him to inventor of Local Memory.

Mr. Paulsen, therefore, is not an isolated case, as the reader will infer from the instances we have given. His achievements will not bear comparison with efforts of the human mind, made centures before he had an existence.

The Caalo and M'Kinden Casz.—The Shippensburg (Pa.) News quotes from the Chambersburg Valley Spirit a full account of the shooting affray between the McKibbens and Craig, the substance of which is already known to our readers. The Spirit's statement is an impartial one, and no one can read it without feeling incensed at the two brothers who so cowardly made joint onset upon one weak man. To the credit of the senior McKibben, the father of the cowardly assailants, we quote the following from the Spirit's account:

To the credit of the senior McKibben, the father of the cowardly assailants, we quote the following from the Spirit's account:

"Last summer an afflictive event cast its shadow over the household. A gun in the hands of a young son of Mrs. Craig was accidentally discharged, killing instantly a little daughter of the same laddy. After this sad affair, the boy whose distress was unbounded, was taken to Pittsburgh by his grandfather Craig, that his mind might be relieved from the dreadful impression made upon it by the tragic scene of which he had, without design, been the leading account. Yesterday the boy was brought back by his father and sent out to McKibben. Mr. McKibben, moved by a feeling that whom they spent a happy hour at Jeffrey's Hotel.

Mr. Kokibben likewise came to town himself, for the purpose of preventing any difficulty, and induced his sons, whose feelings towards Mr. Craig were known to him, to accompany him out to the farm. They went, but unfortunately learned from the boy who had just returned that his father had brought him and was then in glown.
