HOARDING UP SPECIS.—The Easton Argust mentions an incident of an old gentleman received in Lehigh country, who had been suspected of having considerable money in his house, although no one knew the amount. On examining, the premises after his death, no less than eleven thousand dollars were found in specie, will alcolor the mount of the South, on the contrary, there is no lack of this winter as they were place of power there. From the purlieus of vice, from sinks of iniquity and noxious cavers of fills, no starvation, no per ceptible want: the laborers under the slave system are as well off this winter as they were ceptible want: the laborers under the slave system are as well off this winter as they were ceptible want: the laborers under the slave system are as well off this winter as they were ceptible want: the laborers under the slave system are as well off this winter as they were ceptible want: the laborers under the slave system are as well off this winter as they were ceptible want: the laborers under the slave system are as well off this winter as they were laborers and the manuely off the manuely off the Amanuely of the Am of filth where only democracy can thrive, from the off-scourings of the jails of Europe, from the Red Republicans of France, the carbonarii of Italy and the Socialists of all climes, whose only bonds of union are hatred of religion and a fierce desire for a general distribution of property, Fernanda Wood has collected such a hand of supporters as perhaps no other city of the world could now or ever in any past time afford. White the Herald is thus arguing that the unemployed workmen of New York, who are roving its streets in bands demanding work, would be election, is the name of Salmon P. Chase, who is thus made responsible for a Pro-Slavery ballot. For casting out the vote of Gov. Chase, Walker off on these workingmen as their friend. The candidate tries to make political capital out of their miseries, while his organ is advocating their reduction to a state of Slavery. Perhaps Whitefriars in the days of James I. whither the man who had cut his neighbor's throat, robbed his employer's till, or taken life on the highway, might fiee and find safety among kith and kin, might have afforded similar aid and succor to Mayor Wood, if that age had been sufficiently unfortunate to have such a man and such a party had been needed to prop him up. Be this last; however, as it may, into the crowd of combustibles, gathered from every corner of the globe the wretched demagogue who is Democratic candidate for Mayor in the approaching charter election, fung the firebrand with reckless hand; promised aid through the Councils which he knew they had not the ability slave labor is so much superior to the free labor.

Yet the proscountry.

The question now most generally discussed, is what saved Cincinnati? to this the most general reply is, "the absence of Banks." For it is generally thought now that if we had enjoyed large "lines of bank discounts, our city would have been under the best wicked locofoco demagogue, who for votes kindles the worst passions of the worst men, and has now raised a whirlwind he cannot control. chere are not enough of us. We will hold another meeting, perhaps to-morrow, and then, instead of being two or three thousand, we can call twenty thousand men to this spot. Then we can go with effect, and make the hearts of the purse-proud bankers tremble within them.

The conclusion of these remarks was greeted with furious applause.

The Peess publishes the above and other still more fierce threats and cries. It adds:

"A mammoth meeting may be looked for on Thursday next, as we learn unofficially that notice will be given to the unemployed in the Seventeenth and Nineteenth wards to be present on the occasion. We would remark in this connection that the above incendiary remarks were not approved by the officers of the meeting, though at the time they gave no dissent to them.

Lucantary Bankara Bernson, we find in a very comfortable condition—the leaders and a ve approved by the officers of the meeting, though at the time they gave no dissent to them.

IMPORTANT RAILEGAD DECISION.—We find in the New York Trues a very important Railroad decision which, from its applicability here, should have due weight in this State. The Times Bays:

The many of them were smoking cigars—the man avery comfortable condition—the leaders and speakers had on nice black coats, their hands were soft oud white, and the only work they seemed at all inclined to do was that of inducing the condidate of the Democratic party.
