This Superior Miner gives some very encouraging intelligence about the Mass Mine at Lake Superior. A vein or course of copper has been uncovered to the sast of the first works, at a new point, which the sast of the first works, at a new point, which the sast of the first works, at a new with the sast of the first works, at a new with the sast of the first works, at a new with the sast of the first which those works were made. For some many horns of copper appear for the entire length indicating, as several of our best miners seem to think, a continuous mass, for that distance. The width of the vein matter is also a valuable feature. Considerable excitement has attended this remarkable discovery, but the libor of a few weeks is necessary to justify an opinion as to its true value. Its present appearance, however, is exceedingly promising.

The Minnesota and Rockland mines are reported as doing a first rate business. Tolebo, Jan, 11.—The weather is cloudy with high winds from the South West, Mercury 56 degrees.

McLean, of the Associate Church, now principal of the High School, who will hereafter share with him the editorial labors. The ancient title of the paper has also been dropped, and it is now simply The United Presbyterian. This change has been made in anticipation of the name the Associate and Associate Reformed Churches will assume after their union is consummated. The paper is likewise much improved in appearance, having been enlarged and arrayed in a bran new dress. This is a well conducted and an excellent paper, and in the new circumstances above noted, we wish it great success.
